EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

THE Prohibitionists have carried every county in Florida so far as elections have been held.

IT is said that real estate amounting to $50,000,000 changes hands weekly now in San Francisco.

Hawthorne did not write his "Scarlet Letter" with red ink. It continues to be read notwithstanding.

WHAT a pity that a man cannot be induced to sign the pledge until he has spent all his money for whisky.

REV. DR. MONROE says there is as much Mormonism hereabouts as in Utah, and we have no reason to doubt it

IT will never do to elect a third termer to office in this the first year of the second century of constitutional government.

MONARCHY has no foothold in France, and the people, loyal to the Republic, will take care that it does not obtain even a toehold.

BOB INGERSOLL is said to be writing a play. It is supposed to be a new version of the Black Crook, with Bob himself in the title role.

THE centennial of the constitution has been duly celebrated. Now resolve to make the second century of its existence more glorious than the first.

TENNESSEE will vote this fall on a liquor prohibitory amendment, and, to the discredit of the National Administration, it is said to be interfering with the State affairs of Tennessee in its endeavor to defeat the amendment.

HOME rule for Scotland follows on the heels of the Irish question as a matter of agitation. The principle looks right, but can the clans keep from fighting each other if they lose their identity with National affairs?

THE Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin says: "Cleveland's electioneering tour will keep him away from Washington for months. It will be the biggest experience of the kind ever tried, and will cost a large sum of money."

ONE of the strongest arguments in favor of the Republican county ticket this year is found in the fact that Democratic papers cannot find a word to say against it, while the Democratic ticket is one of the weakest ever nominated.

CAPTAIN WM. B. HART, Republican candidate for State Treasurer, will have hosts of warm supporters from the veterans of the late war. He was a brave soldier boy, starting a private in the ranks and working his way up by merit, to the rank of captain.

A Cheap National Telegraph.

The prospective absorption of the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph system by the rapacious Western Union revives the gossip regarding the possibility and probability of the creation by Congress of a government telegraph system in connection with the Post Office department.

The postal telegraph of England and other European countries has been so much a success that those who are studying this problem of a government telegraph for popular use find themselves a good deal encouraged in their belief that the system will be adopted here. The latest annual report of the British Post Office Department shows that the number of messages sent by the postal telegraph system of Great Britain last year was, in round numbers, 40,000,000. A couple of years ago the price of telegrams was put down to a six-pence for any part of the United Kingdom, and the result was an increase of nearly 20 per cent. in the volume of business. There has been a steady growth in the use of the telegraph by the masses since the government took possession of it, and when an Englishman comes to this country and is required to pay a dollar for what costs him in his own country only a sixpence it is not strange if we seem to him to be behind the times in at least one respect. The number of messages sent in 1870 was less than 10,000,000; in 1886, 40,000,000. They were carried for a sixpence a piece and a profit made on them, too. There has also been established within the past few years a telephone system as a part of the Post Office Department and aid to the telegraph. There are some thirty odd exchanges with thousands of subscribers. The department has, also, twenty-seven miles of pneumatic tubes in London by which messages are sent to and from the telegraph offices in London. They carry these manuscript messages, in letter boxes which shoot along underground, inside the tubes, at the rate of thirty miles an hour. On a recent occasion, when the Irish bill was under discussion at the House of Commons, over 700 manuscript messages were thus sent by these tubes to the main office of the government's postal telegraph, in a single night's business, and over a million and a half of words were sent by the wires on that same occasion.

The Postal Savings Bank system of Great Britain is quite as important a feature of the Post Office Department as is the telegraph system. Its depositors now number three and a half millions and their deposits seventy-five million dollars.

THE hostility of the Democratic party to protection has entailed upon the country a vast loss and has in many ways obstructed the progress and development of certain sections. Since the financial panic of 1873 and the contemporaneous solidification of the Southern vote the Democratic party has, with the exception of a single Congress, held control of the House of Representatives. The power to originate revenue bills has been exclusively in their hands, and they have used it to the confusion, the detriment, in many instances to the destruction of new enterprises throughout the Union. Confidence once shaken is hard to restore and the schemes of improvement which have been abandoned within the past ten years on account of the uncertainty of our revenue laws, constantly menaced by the Democratic party in Congress, would have caused prosperity and happiness in many communities which have felt the discouraging influence of dull times.

OF COURSE, Mrs. Cleveland was right in refusing to go to New York city to take part in the presentation of flags, in which presentation her husband had no part. Mrs. Cleveland is usually right in what she does. While the lady can engage in such public exercises only when her husband also takes part, it must be exceedingly aggravating for her to know that her husband always makes such awkward blunders in all his public appearances. We imagine the President often receives lively curtain lectures from his indignant wife. She is the personification of refinement and good breeding while he is untutored and uncouth. It will take her a long time to smooth off his rough edges, but she is endeavoring to do the best she can and we bid her success.

HENRY GEORGE is rapidly acquiring the habits of the "bloated capitalists" whom he spends so much time abusing. On Friday he allowed himself to be fined rather than serve on the jury. Better, Mr. George, aid in administering laws proved to be good than in advocating measures that nobody but a dreamer ever thought of.

Responsible Work Well Done.

Few Judges have ever had more responsible duties thrust upon them than had Judge Gary in the trial of the Anarchists. That he succeeded in carrying the cases through all the difficulties and intricacies connected with capital offenses without making a single material error is of itself marvelous. But aside from the formalities and technicalities which had to be literally followed, there were principles of law to be applied to new conditions of crime, and such a formidable list of exceptions that the wonder is how the record was kept free from errors.

It is the testimony of the Supreme Court, however, that none of the errors complained of were of such serious character as to require a reversal of the judgment; that considering the number of defendants on trial, the vast amount of testimony offered and the almost numberless rulings the Court was required to make, the wonder is that errors were not more numerous and serious. In a word, the opinion which Judge Gary reached "vindicates the law and does complete justice between the people of the State and the defendants, and was fully warranted by the law and the evidence." Surely this was responsible work well done.

It is worth considering, in view of the uncertainties connected with the case, what might have been the effect of a reversal. Is there any likelihood that another jury could have been found equal to the task of a fair and honest trial? Could such a jury be had much of the testimony adduced on the first trial would be impossible of attainment at the second. A number of the most important witnesses have disappeared, and the ordering of a new trial would have been equivalent to an acquittal. The moral effect, then, of a single material error in the trial would have been most disastrous. Instead of the awe which has been inspired by the affirmation of the judgment, the turbulent and lawless classes would now be holding high carnival—heaping contempt upon the law and hurling defiance in the face of its ministers. The whole proceeding would have been a lamentable miscarriage of justice instead of a complete vindication of the law. The country cannot too highly appreciate the sterling integrity and the painstaking ability of Judge Gary.

THE art of weather prophecy in New York, so far as the winds are concerned, got a rather unfavorable illustration in connection with the trial yacht races. On the day of the second attempt the predictions of newspapers were for a fresh breeze, and the yachts were not able to drift a respectable distance from the starting point. On Friday the newspaper prophets declared the indications unfavorable for a wind, and the race was sailed under a 20-mile breeze. Unless the New York newspaper prophets can do better than this, the yachtsmen will be disposed to go back to the signs of the goose bone and braying donkeys.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is not a happy speech-maker. When he suggested to the business men of Philadelphia that they "strive for the advancement of the entire country even to the diminution of their constantly increasing profits," it must have sent a cold chill down their spinal column. Such a flap-doodle may do among a people who are not conversant with business, but the thorough-going commercial man knows that the advancement of the entire country pays, and that any advancement which diminishes his profits is no advancement, but retrogression.

SOME of the great magnates as well as the inferior folks of the land were crowded while in Philadelphia to attend the centennial. Senator Don Cameron endeavored for hours to force his way through the crowds to some place where he would be recognized, and failed. He was also unable to secure quarters at the hotel. Disgusted, he departed for New York city.

THE Baltimore Civil Service Reformer, which is actively supporting the Independent-Democratic movement in Maryland, declares that between 20,000 and 30,000 names are illegally registered in the city of Baltimore alone.

Wrong Deductions.

A meeting of window glass manufacturers in Pittsburg, the other day, gave the following as an expersion of its opinion:

A comparative calculation was read, showing that foreign glass can be set down in New York as cheap and cheaper than American glass can be made, and it was deemed surprising that American workmen ignored this fact and in the face of it are trying to force up the American product. Importations are encouraged by high prices and over 1,000,000 boxes are imported annually, the keeping out of which would operate home factories all the year. The deduction was made that a reduction of wages is necessary to enable manufacturers and workers to gain full control of the home markets; but as the manufacturers are averse to strikes and conflicts they do not press for a reduction this year.

Instead of a reduction in laborer's wages these manufacturers—and laborers, too,—should unite with the Republican party in putting a higher tariff on imported glass. This fact is as clear as glass. Strange if they don't see it.

IT might be supposed that the result of a quarter of a century of protection had been to increase the cost of living. But the prices current of revenue tariff times and of to-day show to the contrary. We are now making and selling a great variety of the products of skilled labor much cheaper to the consumer than they were afforded by foreign producers thirty years ago. In addition to this, we are employing hundreds of thousands of men and women in this species of production, and paying them generous wages for doing the very work formerly done abroad. We have established great plants, both for the production of raw materials and for working them up into marketable products, so that now we are more independent than ever before. Yet the cry of "cheap goods" is raised by men who know, if they know anything, that "cheap goods" involve cheap porduction, and there can be no cheapening of production at this time without cheapening labor. Not less than seventy per cent. of the cost of nearly everything we produce represents labor. In all this specious juggling with words the insincerity of the doctrinaire leaders is conspicuous.

THE Republican Convention of this State last year issued an address to the voters, in which the following self evident propositions were presented. "Anything that is calculated to lessen the products of American labor decreases the wages of the American workmen. Every dollar's worth of goods manufactured abroad and imported into the United States displaces a dollar's worth of home production; and the American workman suffers accordingly; hence, strikes and labor troubles have followed these attempts of the Democratic party to degrade American labor to the European standard, by removing wholly or partially the duty upon goods of foreign manufacture, and their culmination has been reached in the election of a Free Trade Administration." Let every one who invests capital in our industries, and all who live by their labor digest these facts, and vote accordingly.

THIS time it is Russia who has discovered a new explosive compound that will annihilate whole regiments and armies in a flash. Last week it was Germany who had the champion life-destroying explosive; the week before it was France. The development in destructive forces of warfare cannot be made too fast. When the whole armies are slaughtered in a day, as promises to happen in the next conflict between European Nations, civilization will cry "Hold, enough!" and war will have brought an end to itself.

PHILADELPHIA, one of the strongest Republican cities of the country, honored itself by honoring President Cleveland with one of the most hearty and enthusiastic receptions he has yet received anywhere. All parties joined in the reception with good will and enthusiasm. President Cleveland is the Chief Magistrate, not of a party, but of the whole nation, and it was befitting that at the Constitutional centenary he should be thus heartily welcomed to the city where first was proclaimed "Liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof."

IN France, hereafter, the ninth child in every family will be educated at the government's expense. In many States of our country, the child of the poor man as well as the rich, no matter how many of them there may be, can receive a good education at the public expense. Yet we have people who do not appreciate these advantages nor care to see to it that their children are profited thereby. With education so full and so free in our country, and especially in Pennsylvania, there is no excuse for the rising generation growing up in ignorance.

THE New York Times, Mugwump organ, speaking of the New York Republican convention, says: "The ticket is the main thing in a nominating convention, and the ticket presented to the voters of the State of New York by the Republican convention at Saratoga yesterday is one of which, considered by itself, any Republican can support with good will. With the exception of Col. Fred Grant the gentlemen named as candidates for the State offices to be filled this year are quite unknown to the party and to the people of the State, but they are men of local repute and entirely capable, no doubt, of performing the duties of the offices for which they have been nominated. Col. Grant, who heads the ticket, although he has not inherited the extraordinary qualities which made his father the most distinguished man of his time, is already favorably known as a gentleman of good sense and modest bearing, and his name will unquestionably be an element of strength in the State and city where Gen. Grant passed the closing days of his life, and whose people revere his memory and cherish the recollections of his great achievements."

P. C. KNOX, ESQ., of Pittsburg, was mainly instrumental in carry out the deal by which the Bedford Springs property passed into the hands of a syndicate of Pittsburg capitalists. The new purchasers have in contemplation improvements which will make the Springs in time as famous as those at Ems and Baden-Baden. A large, new hotel will be erected and extensive baths, where the splendid magnesia water can be taken externally, put up. A railroad from Huntingdon to the Springs will also be built, thus giving easy access to the resort from East to West. The adjoining land will also be plotted and sold, subject to restrictions, to persons who wish to build cottages.

A SOUTHERN Democratic journal tells R. Q. Mills, of Texas, that such a tariff bill as he proposes "would probably cause the Democrats to lose Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, thus insuring disastrous defeat in 1888." While the country could afford to look on an event like the disastrous defeat of the Democracy with considerable equanimity, yet the utterance here quoted indicates that harmony of the Kilkenny cat variety is going to be resumed among the Democrats as soon as Congress begins.

ALL the gossamer rubber clothing manufactured in this country is put upon the market by a syndicate of manufacturers which controls the output. This body of men, perhaps not two score in all, have decided to put up prices twenty per cent. and 60,000,000 of people will have to quietly bear with the stupendous imposition. The beauties of monopolies could hardly be shown up in a more striking light.

THE Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, Mr. Powell, having asserted that his party never made a land grant to a railroad, Governor Foraker invites his attention to the Congressional records, which show that between 1850 and 1861, during Democratic Administrations, forty-three such grants were made, aggregating 32,000,000 acres. Democratic orators are often very forgetful when making stump speeches.

THE Queen of England seems to think that the joint commission to settle the fisheries dispute is a fixed fact because she "has agreed with the President of the United States" to that effect. The impression may dawn upon her later that the President of the United States is not a monarch and that it is not his province to speak of his relations with other Powers as the Queen does.

THE Socialists of New York have formed a new political organization in opposition to the Henry George movement. It has been christened the "Progressive Labor Party." It will be composed largely of the malcontents and discontented spirits of the old world. American laborers ought to keep out of it and away from it.

MR. JOHN F. ANDREW flatly refuses to be the Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts again this year. It is proper to say, therefore, that whatever Mr. Andrews' shortcomings may be in other respects, he is not the sort of man who fails to profit by severe and gloomy experience.

Poetry.

THE DAWN OF WOMANHOOD.

I sit by my window
In the moonlight's "silver rain,"
And I think of my vanished childhood,
With a lingering, wistful pain.
For to-day was a revelation,
And to-morrow can never be
The same bright careless hour
That yesterday was to me.

I long for my vanished freedom,
For my old light hearted glee;
But I find, instead, the fetters
That the day has brought to me.
Well! I'll put my hand in my Father's,
Remembering only this,
That the darkest way will be lighted
If my hand be clasped in His.
—Beulah R. Stevens in Demorest's Monthly.

THE FIRST CIGAR.

A quiet eve beneath the stars, with brother Steve and two cigars.
Behind the shed
we slowly creep!
the folks abed, the world asleep. I strike a light with shaky hand, in such a fright I scarce can stand. Like veterans grim we puff the smoke. My eyes grow dim, I almost choke.
Another, and another pull. How bitter sweet! My mouth is full of the biting weed. My stomach turns; oh, my, how sick! My throat, too, burns—oh, help me
quick, I roll, I squirm with frightened look!
just like a worm on fishing hook. I cry for Steve; my cry's in vain; I see him heave with awful strain!
When hope is fled,
there breaks a light,
behind that shed,
upon our plight—
and dad is here; as forth we crawl, he grasps my ear and—let the curtain fall
An interview next morn we had. Our words were few,
but then our dad behind that shed, he showed us stars that till I'm dead our first cigar I'll never forget.

Our Story Teller

THE SISTERS.

"It's very provoking that we should be detained so," said Mabel Arran, pettishly. "I should have enjoyed the scenery so much if we could have traveled by daylight, and it's nearly dark already.

"Never mind, dear," said her sister Effie, soothingly; "we shall soon be there, you know."

"I don't know what you call soon," fretted Mabel. "We shall not get there until 7 o'clock in the morning, and just fancy how fagged-out and jaded we shall both look, after traveling all night with our eyes as dim as if they had been boiled, and complexion like an old rag. And Mr. St. Albans is to be there, too?"

She bit her lip in very genuine annoyance, as she stood looking out at the white drifts of snow which lay like a mantle of royal ermine on field and valley.

Mabel and Effie Arran, although twin sisters, were not at all alike.

The former, tall and handsome, had features like a Cleopatra, and soft, languid eyes of the deepest blue, while her magnificent flaxen hair surrounded her oval face like a frame work of gold.

Apart from her beautiful sister, gentle little Effie Arran might have had some pretence to be called pretty—but Mabel eclipsed her completely.

"Are you sure you will be warm enough, Mabel, dear?" she asked anxiously. "Do take my shawl; I shall be quite comfortable with the worsted sacque."

"No, I shall not take it," was the haughty reply. "Do you suppose I am going to make a perfect mummy of myself? I look ridiculous enough already in this odious merino dress. Oh, dear, dear, I wish I were rich. Just wait until I have married Mr. St. Albans!"

Effie's cheek crimsoned, as she tied a green barege veil round her bonnet.

"Mabel," she said softly, "do you really care for Mr. St. Albans?"

"Not for him specially, although he is handsome and agreeable enough for any girl—but I do care for his four hundred thousand—and his country seat and his house in town. You shall live with me Effie, and take care of that horrid little girl he talks about; how I do wish he hadn't been a widower, with the incumbrance of a child!"

"I heard you telling him last week how fond you were of children."

"Oh!" laughed Mabel, shrugging her shoulders, "that was policy. I flatter myself, Effie, that I really did make some impression upon him, else he would never have accepted that invitation from Green Court, because we were to spend Christmas there,"

"It was very kind of Alice Green to ask us," said Effie soberly.

"Oh, yes, I dare say," nodded Mabel, "and I shall invite her to St. Albans when I am mistress there. Nobody shall say I am at all ungrateful. Here comes the stage now, horrid, odious, lumbering old thing, and crowded full, as I live. How disagreeable."

And Mabel Arran went out, one shawl thrown lightly over her, while poor Effie followed meekly in the background, laden heavily with traveling bags, umbrellas and wraps.

It was already quite dusk, as the horses stopped at the inn door, and there was a brief delay before they again started on, during which time Mabel squeezed herself in between a fat old woman and a tall schoolboy, with a box of white mice in his lap, while Effie sat directly opposite, trying her innocent little best not to crowd the two vinegar-faced maiden ladies, who sat with smelling-bottles to their noses, and the woman who carried a three-year-old child in her lap. The back seat was filled with masculine travelers, but Mabel never vouchsafed them so much as a glance. The class of gentlemen in which she was most interested generally traveled in their own equipages, not in what Miss Arran called "horrid, odious, lumbering stages!"

As the equipage moved on, the little child began to cry.

"Provoking!" exclaimed Mabel, aloud; "are we to have a crying child to enliven the way? I do think people have no business to travel with babies."

"Mabel, Mabel!" whisperingly remonstrated her sister.

"Well, I can't help it!" fretted the beauty, peevishly, "I hate children."

The woman in whose arms the little one sat, looked distressed and troubled, although the dim lamp that hung from the side of the stage scarcely revealed her countenance, and tried the various devices that are current among mothers and nurses, to soothe her fretful charge, but all in vain—the child still wailed on, to the great disturbance of the closely packed passengers.

"Really," spoke up Mabel Arran, sharply, "this is intolerable! It's nothing on earth but temper; why don't you give her a good shaking?"

"Indeed, ma'am, it's not temper," said the woman, somewhat indignantly. "She's not used to traveling, and she is tired out."

"Let me take her," said Effie's soft voice, as she stretched out her arms. "I know I can quiet her; children are alway good with me."

"You are a fool!" said her sister contemptuously.

But Effie, without heeding Mabel's comment, took the little creature tenderly into her arms, murmuring soft words to it. The child hung around her neck with the instinct which God has given to little ones, recognizing at once a friend in the pretty young girl.

"It's plain to see, miss, that you're fond of children," said the woman, gratefully, as the wailing sounds ceased. "I'm sure I'm very much obliged to you, for my arms ache sadly."

"She's going to sleep now," said Effie, with her cheek close against that of the child. "I will hold her until she wakes up again, poor little thing!"

"I am afraid we're troubling you too much ma'am," said the woman apologetically.

"It's no trouble," said Effie sincerely "It's a pleasure. You guessed rightly, I am very fond of helpless little children."

"Mabel laughed scornfully.

"I am not," she said. "I always had a very earnest sympathy with good King Herod. But I'm very glad the young one has stopped screaming, for I can perhaps get a wink of sleep myself."

The child awoke again, presently crying out—

"Papa, papa!"

But Effie's whispered nursery rhymes and fairy stories acted like a charm on its perturbed spirits.

"Me love oo," said the little thing, winding its arm round Effie's neck. "What oo name?"

"Effie," was the smiling answer.

"Effie go home wiz baby?"

"I should like to, darling," said Effie, pressing her lips to the velvety little forehead, "but——"

At this moment the stage stopped at a junction road, where several of the passengers alighted—among them the woman and child. The little thing clung tightly round Effie's neck, and it was not without some difficulty that she could be coaxed away.

"The little darling," said Effie, half aloud, as she strained her eyes through the darkness of the winter night, to see the last of her tiny fellow pilgrim. "I "I should like to keep her always in my arms."

"The more goose you," said Mabel, impatiently. "I'm so glad those people have all got out; we shall have room enough to breathe in now."

The clear, radiant brightness of the December morning was glittering over the snow-pearled landscape, as the stage rolled up to the door of Green Court, a substantial old brick mansion, where a merry party of visitors were assembled to make the holiday pass as blithely as might be. Alice Green, a pretty young blonde, ran out to welcome them.

"I thought you were never coming," she cried, smothering them with hospitable kisses. "The fire is blazing royally in your bedroom. You'll just have time to get off your things and get rested by lunch time. I'm so sorry we have breakfasted, but you shall have coffee and omelettes in your rooms."

Mabel was not sorry at all, for she rather preferred to rest and recruit a little, before meeting the other guests.

"Is Mr. St. Albans here?" she asked as Alice helped to remove her wrappings in the cheerful apartment which was to be that of the sisters.

"Oh, yes; but he only arrived this morning. He, as well as yourselves, was detained on the journey."

Mabel and Effie both looked very pretty when they came down to luncheon, some four or five hours afterwards—the former in a pale blue cashmere, with blue ribbons at her throat, which gave her hair and skin even more than their natural brightness, and Effie in a quiet little black silk, with the old-fashioned garnet ornaments which had belonged to their dead mother. The room was quite full when they entered it, but foremost in the group around the fire-place Mabel's triumphant eyes recognized Mr. St. Albans, tall, stately and preux chevalier-looking as ever. But before she could speak a little child, with outstretched arms recognized Effie's voice as she answered some remark of Miss Green's in the door-way.

"Effie!" it cried, "Effie!"

And to her surprise Effie found herself confronted with her little acquaintance of the night before.

"My little Minnie has an excellent memory for her friends," said Mr. St. Albans, approaching with a smile. May I venture to thank you, Miss Arran, for the kindness you showed her last night?"

Effie blushed scarlet with embarrassment?

"Was she your child, Mr. St. Albans?"

He nodded smilingly.

"Our carriage broke down at Grove's Glen, and we were obliged to take the night stage on to T——, where I had telegraphed for another equipage to meet us. I had no idea that I was to be favored with your company, until your sister"—with a cold bow to Mabel—"objected so decidedly to my poor little Minnie's lamentations. Forgive me if, after that, I kept silence as to identity."

Mabel bit her lips, but she was too self-possessed to betray her discomfiture.

"I was very tired," she said, "and I dare say I was very cross. Of course if I had known whom she was ——"

And with a smile she took Hubert Green's arm for the lunch table. A smile—when she could almost have wept, to think how utterly she had defeated her own purpose.

Little Minnie St. Albans clung tightly to Effie Arran during the rest of the day—and of course it was not so very unnatural that Mr. St. Albans should stay where his little daughter preferred to be, and Mabel had to amuse herself as best she could with the school-boy attentions of Mr. Hubert Green.

When they left Green Court Effie had consented to "stay with Minnie always" in the capacity of her stepmother. For Mr. St. Albans, fancy for Mabel's beautiful face had long ago been submerged in his genuine admiration of Effie's far more lovely character.

"I shall always be thankful for that night's ride in the stage," he said earnestly.

But Mabel Arran was not so thankful for it.

A Voice of the Night.

The house is quiet. The last fellow has fallen over the chair, banged his boots on the floor and retired to rest. The last creak of his bed, the last tremble of the floor, has died away through the house. There is a peace of dreamland over all, and the moonbeams fall through the uneven glass panes and make a kind of a thick light on the floors, when suddenly from one of the rooms comes:

"Oh! Mrs. Jobkins! Mrs. Jobkins!"

"What is it?" In a shrill night key from a woman four doors off.

"What relation are you to Alice Jobkins?"

"First cousin!" in the same sharp, high voice. "Why?"

"Oh, nothing. I only thought I'd ask."

And everybody in the hotel having possession of the valuable information, the peaceful snore of rest echoes again through unheeding ears. Isn't it lovely and delightful to be away in the country where the disturbance of endless city life cannot disturb our slumbers?"

The Revenue Measures.

The two revenue bills now pending before the Revenue Commission present but two points of divergence from the measure of last winter which was so mysteriously ended in the House of its real friends. As already stated in the press, the provision of last winter's bill reducing the rate of taxation on the business of foreign companies has been omitted in deference to the views of the Governor.

With this exception one of the bills before the Commission is practically that of last winter. The other has an additional point of difference. Instead of taxing the business of carrying companies on their gross receipts for purely State business—the limit being set by the last United States Supreme Court decision—the twenty-fourth section provides for taxing such corporations on the averagemarket value of their shares.

Among the Little Ones.

Not a talkative man. Old gentleman—"Little boy, what do you s'pose your pa would say if he caught you fishing on Sunday?" Little boy—"Say? He wouldn't say nothing."

"I ain't afraid of lightning any more, God sends the lightning and God would'nt hurt me; he only sends it to take away the bad air." The little one's brother, who was of a very practical turn of mind, and who has seen trees and houses that had been torn up and bruised by lightning, sniffed at this declaration by his sister and remarked: "I want you to understand that God is pretty careless sometimes."

A small boy, Tommy Peterby, who is one of a family of ten, was taken out in the family carriage with his mother. As they drove past a small cottage of three rooms Mrs. Peterby remarked how pretty it looked.

"Yes, it looks very nice," said Tommy, "and it wouldn't be a bit too big for our family if it wasn't for pa and the children."

Omaha child (passing a cigar store sign)—"Oh, mammy, what a funny man!"

Mamma—"That is 'Punch.'"

"That's a funny name, too, but isn't he dressed funny? It's his wife's dress, I guess, an' he's got it on wrong."

"His wife's?"

"Yes, he's got the bustle way up on his shoulder."

What Mrs. Grundy Says.

That the American railroad of to-day is a very peculiar and odd corporation.

That men who have no money to bet do not attend professional base ball games.

That Cleveland's managers ought to bill this as his "positively farewell tour."

That it ill becomes dukes under scandal's clouds to criticise the American press.

That the only obstacle to successful house-keeping nowadays is the "servantgalism."

That there is a prejudice against a too shiny hat among men who are not politicians.

That the hired girl now stipulates for a hard-wood floor and a rug in her top-floor apartments.

That gambling is doing a great deal to bring most of the outdoor sports into disrepute.

That physicians treat for starvation people who did not tip the waiters at the watering place hotels.

That the more privileges most of the working classes want, the more they actually "demand."

That one of the good signs of the times is the steady advance in the price of certain bank stocks.

That it would be a good thing if the ocean could swallow all the scandals of the Long Branch season.

The Reports About Mr. Blaine.

When Stephen B. Elkins says he does not know about Mr. Blaine wanting the Presidential nomination, and in the same breath says, as his deliberate belief, that he will be nominated, whether he wants to be or not, one may as well cease to doubt on either branch of the proposition, so far as Mr. Elkins is authority.

The recent report from Hamburg that Mr. Blaine, when visiting a great banking house there, said that he neither desired nor would accept the Presidential nomination, is obviously a misreport. What Mr. Blaine said was doubtless that he was not striving for the nomination and had not said he was a candidate—this, or its equivalent. He has said he would not accept the nomination unless he could be assured he would be elected, and sometimes has added that he believed that if nominated his election would depend on New York.

It is no secret that Mr. Blaine holds the question in abeyance on his mind on this account. Despite Mr. Elkins' wholesale disposal of the whole matter Mr. Blaine will have something to say about it. There is no mystery. Mr. Blaine's position is perfectly well understood and satisfactory to his friends. If when the convention meets Mr. Blaine says he wishes the nomination he will have it. It is this most likely that Mr. Elkins meant to say, if it was not what he did actually say.

The best way to remove mosquitoes from a room is to go to another room yourself. They will always be with you.

Strange Rites.

Youth's Companion.

Believers in the Hindoo religion have implicit faith that they can influence the weather by means of sacrifices and incantations. A traveler, among the Himalayas thus describes a Hindoo ceremony at which he was present. He had been invited by one of the head men of the Gudui tribe, in the Ravi Valley, to a great sacrifice which was to be offered to the snake of good, Kailung Nag. The object of the sacrifice was to insure fine weather for the sowing.

I arrived at the temple early, as I wished to see the preliminary arrangements, and was much amused at the rather niggardly way in which the assembled villagers subscribed the necessary sum for the purchase of the victim. After some time an old woman stood up and made a vigorous speech, asking the men how they could expect any favor from the deota when they contributed so grudgingly. This soon produced the requisite amount, and a man was sent to buy a sheep.

The men that sat around in a circle near the temple, and the women sat by themselves at a little distance. The music struck up and some of the men and boys began to dance, the chela, or ministering disciple amongst them. After a time the music became wilder, and the dance more energetic. The chela then produced the soongul, or shouts from the spectators Kailung Manaraj ki jai! ("Victory to the great King Kailung.")

The scourge is a formidable instrument. It is somewhat like the old cat-o'-nine-tails in shape, but has only five tails, and is made entirely of iron. Each tail is formed of three links, and is terminated by a sharp lancet-shaped blade. The weight of a soongul varies from two to ten pounds. An orthodox Brahman, attached to the temple, burned incense and repeated muntras. At length, all being ready, the head of the victim was struck off with an axe. The body was then lifted up by several men, and the chela, seizing upon it like a tiger, drank the blood as it spirted from the neck. When all the blood had been sucked from the carcass, it was thrown down upon the ground amid yells and shouts of "Kailung Manaraj ki jai!" The dancing was then renewed, and became more violent, until, after many contortions, the chela gasped out that the deota accepted the sacrifice, and that the season would be favorable.

Red Hair and White Horses.

An Alabama street merchant has as an amanuensis a very pretty little lady whose hair is about the color of the terra cotta trimmings of the Kimball. As a reporter lingered near her desk on Thursday a prominent banker walked in.

"Is Mr. —— in the ——"

Stopping short he walked to the window and looked out. There was a smile on his face when he came back and finished his sentence.

A prominent State official was the next victim. "I want to see Mr. ——," and his eyes turned eagerly to the window.

"Oh, they are only looking for the white horse," was the gentleman's reply to the reporter's look of inquiry.

Two well-known Atlantians were walking by the Governor's mansion a few evenings since, when they overtook a baby carriage containing a six months' old baby with bright red hair. Just as they passed the carriage a white horse dashed by.

"Bet you a fiver it's a girl," said one referring to the baby.

The fond mother was consulted. It was a girl.

The most sensible auburn-haired lady in the city is the one who drives a white horse to her carriage. She saves the "cranks" a great deal of trouble.

A Swindled Millionaire.

Mr. Moneybags, who has recently acquired a fortune—"It's a shame and a disgrace the way everybody conspires to rob a rich man."

Friend—"What's the matter now?"

"Well, you see I had a little party at my mansion last night."

"So I saw by the papers."

"And to amuse my guests I ordered some music."

"Yes, I heard you ordered a quartette."

"Just so, 'and darn my buttons if four singers didn't crowd into the room and sing and I had to pay all four of them, and mind you I only ordered one solitary quartette. That's the way I'm swindled every day of my life and I am tired of it."

This Year's Hot Weather Nowhere

Said Col. Phil Hoynn yesterday: "The hottest day in the history of Chicago was July 4, 1837. At noon on that day the thermometer registered 123 degrees in the shade. The lake stewed and steamed like a teakettle and fish floated ashore already boiled and with cream gravy on them."

"On Aug. 6, 1846, "said Amos Lucker, "we caught a blazer. Along about sunset I went out to the barn to see how the stock was getting along. We had twelve fine hogs just ready for the market. Well, when I got to the barnyard all I could find of them hogs was twelve buckets of leaf lard.."

All Sorts.

A man who pleads drunkenness as an excuse for crime expects to get off on a mental alibi.

An English writer says: "The girl of England stands alone." The girl of America has to be supported.

The life insurance system will not be complete until some plan of insuring the life of the life company is perfected.

"John," said the wife of a Kentucky editor, "your patent combination pocket knife is all rusty—all but the corkscrew part."

Wife—"In the game of lawn tennis, my dear, what is the most difficult thing to acquire?" Husband—"The lawn."

The man who knows everything, says we are going to have an early fall and a long winter. Wait and see what he knows about it.

"Procrastination" may be, as the the poets insist, "thief of time," but certain if is, it is one of the few friends that Mr. Jacob Sharp has now left.

A Kansas City man has a lemon that weighs six pounds, twelve and one-quarter ounces. Circuses desiring to use photographs of the weed to stir into water for lemonade purposes are now being supplied.

Many a lady will extol the fairness and spread the fame of a business house during her whole lifetime just because of some little concession they made to her, which cost them little, but flattered her self-esteem.

Clerk to employer: "What shall I mark that new lot of black silk at?" Employer: "Mark the selling price ten shillings a yard." Clerk: "But it only cost four shillings a yard." Employer: "I don't care what it cost."

Trying to make her country cousin presentable at the table, a city young lady said, "Now Lem, when pie is served you must not use you knife in eating it." "Gosh all hemlock, Tody, I never do. I allers take my piece er pie right into my hand when I eats it."

Six Scotch bailies came up to town to present an address of congratulation to her majesty. They ask what they had to do on entering the queen's presence, and were told they should kiss hands. Thereupon Bailie No. 1, as he solemnly stalked past the throne, raised his hand to his mouth and threw her Majesty a kiss. The remaining five followed suit, till the queen had a fit of the heartiest laughter she had enjoyed for a long time.

"Do you suffer much from cold feet?" inquired the shoe merchant with kindly interest, as he complied with the lady's request and showed her the thickest-soled shoes he had in the store.

"She suffer?" broke in her husband impetuously. "Great Scott! She suffer? Not much. I'm the victim. I'm the one that has to suf——"

"George!" said the lady. That was all she said, but George seemed to understand, and there was a silence that was not broken until the merchant observed in a deferential and funeral way that it looked as if there was going to be some kind of a storm if the wind didn't change.

Uncle Sam's Pensioners.

In his annual report, Pension Commissioner Black recommends that the allowance of $2 per month to minor children be increased to $5; that the act of June 16, 1880, be amended so as to extend its benefits to those who have subsequently become helpless on the account of the aggravation of their maladies; that a widow's pension be allowed to date from the death of her husband; that the law be so amended that a person cannot draw more than one pension; that an individual may be pensioned according to his rank subsequent to the time of his injuries; that the pension for total deafness be raised to $30 per month; that discretion be lodged in the commissioner in correcting discrepancies in rates of pension for loss of limbs or Congress should be asked to establish a table of rates for loss of limbs; that the law be amended so that the commissioner shall be authorized to pay the pension to the wife of a pensioner or to a suitable person on behalf of his children, when the habits of the pensioner show him to be an unfit person to receive or disburse the pension.

The Great Day in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, September 15.—The streets to-day presented an appearance that is lovely in the extreme. In all directions as far as the eye can reach it was one mass of bunting and decoration. Many of the newspaper offices and public buildings made a lavish display, the decorators having worked early and late to complete their work in time. At daylight this morning they were still at work putting the finishing touches, which have been more or less delayed by the inclement weather. Every arrangement has been made by those in charge and the day was one of the most eventful ones in the history of the civilized world.

Amid the gay holiday attire of the streets there is nothing more conspicuous and artistic than the three triumphal arches that span Broad and Chestnut streets. The Broad street arch is the principal one. It was erected by the centennial commission and is sixty feet high, springing from each curb; is of plain semi-circular form and segmented on the south side with illuminated shields of the thirty-eight states forming the union, and on the north with the name of the states, the shield and name of each being back to back. The thirteen original states occupy the middle position of the group, and the others are placed alongside in the order in which they came into the union. Surmounting the arch is a mammoth device consisting of an American eagle and a stand of national colors.

The scene at the grand reviewing stand, situated opposite the Union League club house, on Broad street, just below Sansom, was a grand one. The stands on either side of Broad street were filled with people and the gay colors of the ladies' and children's raiment lent beauty to the magnificent and elaborate decorations of the various stands themselves. There were sixteen telegraph stations along the route of the parade, which were established for the purpose of communicating from one end of the line to the other, and just as a telegram flashed over the wire announcing that the pageant had started from Broad and Dauphin streets at 10.25 a. m., Governor Beaver rode by in his carriage and was greeted with a hearty round of applause.

The constitutional centennial commission was officially represented on the grand stand by Hon. John A. Kasson, president; Hon. Amos. B. Little, chairman of the executive committee; Hampton L. Carson, secretary; F. Carroll Brewster, Jr., corresponding secretary, and Assistant Secretary Black, who occupied seats on the front of the stand. Section A, the central portion of the stand, was reserved for the Governors of the states with their staffs. On this stand also were senators and representatives in congress, many of whom were present, the commissioners of the various states and territories, thirty-five of whom were present, the diplomatic corps and also the foreign consuls and especially invited guests of the commission. Section B contained distinguished visitors.

By 11 o'clock the distinguished guests, the governors, foreign ministers and others began to pour into their assigned places thick and fast. As the different governors passed up or down Broad street and were recognized they received round after round of cheers, and the ladies and children, joined in the greeting by waving their hands, handkerchiefs and parasols.

The monster civic and industrial pageant started from Broad and Dauphin streets shortly after 10 o'clock, and marched to Broad and Moore streets, a distance of nearly five miles, and then countermarched to the starting point, passing through one continuous line of observation stands gaily decorated with the flags of all nations. The head of the procession, led by a cordon of mounted police, reached City Hall, Broad and Market streets, at 11.40. The crowd was so immense at this point that the police had great difficulty in driving them back. The street was, however, cleared in time to prevent a stoppage of the moving pageant which proceeded around the west side of the City Hall and on past the grand reviewing stand at Walnut street.

The Military Parade.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Nearly thirty thousand uniformed soldiers passed in review before the chief magistrate and the high officers of this and other governments before noon, and at their head rode the gallant cavalry hero, General Phil H. Sheridan. There are at least half a million strangers within the city's gates to-day, and even with this vast throng, in addition to the million of inhabitants, the page of history made yesterday passed away without a blot. Not a single accident of a serious nature marred the occasion. Everybody was good natured and forebearing and had but one object in their mind's eye—the peaceful and happy celebration of the greatest event of civilized times.

The procession to-day went through the principal streets, and a greater number of people were given an opportunity to witness the display than was allowed by yesterday's pageant, which was confined wholly to Broad street.

The first division was composed of two brigades, one from the United States and the other from the navy. Brevet Brigadier General Richard H. Jackson, of the United States army, commanded the army brigade, and Rear Admiral Luce the naval brigade. There were seven batteries of artillery and two troops af cavalry in the army brigade. In the naval brigade were detachments from the flagship of Richmond, the Ossipee, Galena, Yantic Dolphin and Atlanta and a marine battalion under Lieutenant Colonel James Forney.

The second consisted of Delaware troops and Governor Biggs and staff. It had the First regiment infantry and troop B, of Delaware.

The Third division was composed of the famous Pennsylvania division of National Guards, led by Governor Beaver and staff, followed by General Hartranft and staff. The First brigade, under General Snowden and staff, marched in the following order: Second regiment, Colonel Dechter; Sixth, Colonel Schall; Third, Colonel Bonnaffon; First, Colonel Bowman; Fencibles, Major Chew; Gray Invincibles, Captain Hailstock; Battery A, Captain Stafford; City Troop, Captain Grubb. The Third brigade followed under General Gobin and staff. The Twelfth regiment had the right of line, followed in order by the Thirteenth and Ninth. Eighth and Fourth regiments and Battery C. The Second brigade was commanded by General Wylie and staff, followed by the Tenth, Fifteenth, Fourteenth, Eighteenth, Sixteenth and Fifth regiment, Battery B and Sheridan Troop. The rear of the division was brought up by the provisional brigade of cadets, under Lieutenant Colonel Bosbyshell; Girard College cadets, under Colonel Ward; Soldiers' Orphans' Institute cadets, under Major Spicer, and Second Regiment cadets under Captain Hartung.

She Gave Him a Cue.

American girl (in London)—"You are the one who sends little personal items to the home papers aren't you?"

London correspondent—"Yes, miss. Going to appear on the stage?"

"Oh, no; I only want a little mention in the society department. You see I have bought a hat exactly like that worn by the Princess of Wales, and—"

"Yes, miss, a little item to the effect that you and the Princess looked equally pretty in the same sort of a hat can be run in nicely."

"Oh, but I want something more pronounced than that, you know."

"Let me see. Well, I can say that at the garden party your hat was exactly like that worn by the princess, thus similarity of taste, and—"

"That won't; do it hasn't the right sort of a ring somehow."

"You will have to prompt me, then."

"Just state in a few plain words that as soon as the princess caught sight of me she rushed off and bought a hat exactly like mine; that's all I want."

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., also, CONSUMPTION, EPILEPSY and FITS, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

Music in the Air.

PHILADELPHIA, September 17.—The music of 2,000 children's voices rose into the air, to-day, and its sweet treble broke through the leaves and floated to the sky above, carrying a message of patriotic gladness. In the centre of the amphitheatre over which their voices rang a fac simile of the original constitution reflected the sunlight. About it was grouped a gathering of notables. When all had entered there were the president of the United States, "the creature of the constitution" come to the shrine of its birthplace; governors and ex-governors and other men as foremost in their modern day as were the founders of our government in theirs.

The celebration was at once dignified and full of popular interest. The vast throng that covered the square beyond the stand swayed with waves of eagerness that threatened to sweep up the great stand and overwhelm it; but with that energetic tact which has distinguished the police all through this concentration of unprecedented crowds, the multitude were kept in bounds, and the orderly performance of the programme was not interrupted. The burst of enthusiasm that greeted the appearance of Mrs. Cleveland, whitening the ranks of spectators with handkerchiefs and drawing cheers from the surging throng below; the cordial welcome given the President; the respectful attitude of attention preserved throughout Justice Miller's oration, which the rustling foliage and the vast space confined so far as hearing was concerned, to those immediately about him; the commemorative poem, partly enunciated and partly sung; the strains of music sweetly floating over the square and making the leaves quiver with harmony—all these combined to make the celebration uniquely impressive.

Aside from this celebration, the day was largely given to continued expressions of popular good will and of social welcome to the chief magistrate of the nation. Every opportunity was seized to prove the loyalty of the people of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania, and of the visitors gathered in their midst, representing every state in the union, to the federal principle. In the morning the president gave a public reception in the commissioners' room at the city hall. Citizens of all degrees—the "plain people," whose lives and needs it is the duty of a president to understand, so far as one may—formed in a line that trailed from the southern entrance to the public buildings, around the broad plaza clear to the northern side. They filed past the president one by one, until he had grasped 6,000 of their hands. Politics were forgotten; the people honored the "un-crowned king" whom their majority had made.

Caused by Natural Gas.

WHEELING, September 17.—To-night about 8 o'clock the large natural gas main which supplies the La Belle glass works, at Ridgeport, parted, and the gas made its way into the main factory building. Coming in contact with the flames in the furnaces it exploded. Instantly the whole building was a mass of fire, and the blaze quickly communicated to the packing and stock departments, extensive frame buildings of three stories, to the south. In an incredibly short time the whole works, covering about two acres, were in a mass of ruins. The fire viewed from the side of the river was the grandest sight ever witnessed here, especially when the explosion of a lot of chemicals in a separate building sent a shower of sparks and burning brands high in the air.

The factory had two furnaces of ten pots each and made fancy colored shades and the better class of engraved table ware. About 400 persons were thrown out of employment in addition to the loss of $50,000 on buildings and thirty-five on stock, including raw material and manufactured ware. Some valuable packages were saved by being rolled into the river, and about two car loads of packages were shipped out before the fire caught the packing room. The insurance is $50,000 in Wheeling and other companies. The factory has had bad luck and was reorganized about two years ago. It had just begun to see its way clear to success when this calamity overtook it. The fire department of this city was called on for aid and responded But owing to the low water in the river and creek the engines were of little use.

A Railroad Horror in Ohio.

CINCINNATI, O., September 19.—This morning a collision occurred near Forest on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroad which resulted in a frightful disaster. The first section of a freight train broke down and the second section collided with it, instantly killing John Bauch, fireman of the second section. There were several cars of oil in the second section and they caught fire and soon the entire forepart of the train was wrapped in flames. While the trainmen were endeavoring to subdue the fire, a car loaded with dynamite exploded with terrible violence, destroying several cars, tearing up the track and injuring the engineer of the second section and one tramp. The names of neither of the men could be learned.

Captain Robert Guthrie.

ATLANTIC CITY, September 18.—A sad drowning accident occurred here this afternoon. Captain R. B. Guthrie, of Altoona, who was captain of company D, Fifth regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, and cousin of Adjutant General P. N. Guthrie, of Pittsburgh, while bathing in the surf at the foot of Virginia avenue, ventured beyond his depth and was drowned. There was a strong surf all morning, and the undertow was unusually heavy. Captain Guthrie was a daring and graceful bather, but it is believed that he did not notice the strength of the current that was carrying him out. When he did discover his peril he made desperate efforts to get back, but was overcome by the violence of his struggle with the tide, and sank in full view of a party of horrified friends, who had come down with him yesterday from Philadelphia, where they had been attending the centennial celebration. Unavailing efforts to recover the body were made by Captain Mike Bradford, of the life guard.

[The above telegram appeared in the Philadelphia Times. We take it and also the subjoined comments from the Altoona Tribune of this morning. The Captain was well known in military circles of Bellefonte: "Captain Guthrie was born in Lancaster, Pa., and was about 31 years of age. Left an orphan he was reared by relatives in Pittsburgh and came here in 1879, when his cousin, Walter Guthrie, came to this city and engaged in the wholesale provision business with George F. Calhoun under the firm name of Guthrie G Calhoun. With them the deceased was employed for about three years as clerk, afterward serving in a similar capacity with Hurd, Day & Co. About the year 1884 Captain Guthrie bought out this firm and associated in business with him Mr. Benton Whiston, and later sold his interest to Mr. C. Kenneweg. He then traveled for a tobacco firm, his headquarters being in Syracuse, N. Y., and at the time of his death was salesman for Lotz Bros., dealers in starch and soap, of Buffalo, New York. The deceased had for some years been connected with the National Guard of Pennsylvania. He joined as a private of company D, Eighteenth regiment, was afterward corporal of company G, in the same regiment, and when he came to Altoona joined company D, Fifth regiment, and of this company was elected captain on April 22, 1882, and resigned September 5, 1884. He was a member of White Cross lodge No. 354, Knights of Pythias, of Altoona. His nearest living relative is a sister, Mrs. Arthur, of Washington, D. C. The deceased came to Altoona in the interest of his firm about three weeks ago and only last week went to Philadelphia. From there he went to Alantic City, where his death occurred as stated in the above dispatch. So far as could be learned yesterday evening the body of the deceased had not as yet been found."

There May Be an Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—Representative Wilkins, of Ohio, who has just come from New York, says it is generally expected in financial circles that the president will call an extra session of congress, to meet early in November to take some steps to release the treasury surplus and prevent a financial panic, and he is of the opinion himself that it ought to be done and will be done.

"The panic," said he, "is not only impending, but has already begun. Stocks went down several points all round today. Money is scarce. Brokers can borrow money only on call. They want it on time and they can't get it. All the treasury can do in the way of redeeming and buying bonds and anticipating the payment of interest will not be sufficient to relieve the market, and the legality of the treasury's action in regard to the matter of buying bonds is questionable.

"If congress is not called in special session there will be a waste of time, for the first month or six weeks nothing will be done. But if the president calls an extra session to meet in November for the purpose of reducing the treasury surplus, the members will come to Washington with the urgency of the subject on their minds and there will be immediate action."

A Brakeman Killed.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 20.—F. H. Postlethwait, a brakeman on the Pittsburg, McKeesport and Youghiogheny railroad, met with a terrible death last night about 11 o'clock. The accident occurred at the Tenth street bridge. Postlethwait was on top of a freight car, and was just stepping from one car to the other as the train passed under the bridge. His head came in contact with the bridge and he was knocked from the top of the car, falling upon a side track. He was rendered insensible by the blow, and lay upon the track until the locomotive was backed down, passing over his right leg, which caused him to utter a moan. This attracted the attention of the engineer, who procured assistance and removed the unfortunate man to the round house, where he died in a few moments. Postlethwait had been in the employ of the railroad company only since last Thursday. His home is in Somerset county, where his body will be taken for interment. He was 26 years of age and unmarried.

Tons of Dynamite.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 20.—A cart load of dynamite, enough to blow up Havana, was discovered hidden in the woods near this city yesterday. The discovery has created intense excitement, proving that the plot against Cuba is much more formidable than at first supposed. A little dynamite was found here immediately after Aguero's expedition.

The Evening Call prints private advices from Cuba to the effect that Beriben, the filibuster, and his band are safe in the Cuban mountains. In embarking from the boat which carried his party over, Beriben lost a suit of clothes, in the pockets of which were a number of his private letters and other papers. This bundle being found by one Perez, an escaped convict, who was afterwards captured and killed by the Spanish soldiers, was found in the fellow's possession. The body of the convict was brought to Mantanzas and palmed off for that of Beriben. The Havana press then published the account of Beriben's capture and death by authority of the Spanish misrulers of the island of Cuba.

Continuing, the Call says: "Beriben and his command, now numbering several hundred men, well mounted, are in Camarioca mountains, midway between Mantanzas and Cardenas. They will shortly be joined by other friendly forces. Beriben and his followers are in fine spirits and good health."

Victorino Reineri, editor of El Pueblo at Havana, announces in his paper that Acting Governor General Marin has granted him a hearing and will doubtless remit the sentences of fine and imprisonment imposed upon him because he accused public officials of bribery and corruption. Reineri was the victim of 28 libel suits. He openly accuses judges of soliciting bribes to acquit him.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS

—A Rebersburg item in the Centre Hall Reporter relates a most remarkable story in regard to the adventures of a porker. Mr. Jasper Wolf, who lives on Henry Royer's farm, owns a hog which weighed about 400 pounds. One day early in August, this animal was missed and a careful search, during quite a long time, failed to discover where the animal had disappeared to. One day a week or more ago some one in a field on Mr. Royer's farm heard feeble grunts proceedings from deep down in the earth. A deep hole was found where the ground had caved in and on peering into its gloomy depths the lost hog was seen at the bottom. With much difficulty the animal, now lean and emaciated, was brought up. On the forehead of the porker appeared the name "Grover Cleveland" while written on the quicksand where the hole had been made were the words, "November, 1888."

—What shall we do with the Anarchists? They held a meeting in New York City the other day and loud-mouthed, frothy Johann Most made the most incendiary sort of a speech, advocating revolution, murder and everything else that is horrible and destructive. It seems that the common sense element of this country (and certainly nine-tenths of the citizens belong to that class) should take such fellows by the neck and execute them summarily. The policy of this country, heretofore, has been to leave these fellows severely alone to give publicity to incendiary utterances. But they are waxing worse and a change in policy might be wise—perhaps is absolutely necessary.

—Some of our Hebrew citizens enchanged New Year presents on Monday, that being the beginning of a new year according to their computation of time. Wednesday, the 28th inst., will be their Day of Atonement and will be observed by them as a holiday.

Philipsburg Paragraphs.

THE EVENTS OF A LIVELY TOWN RECORDED BY A DILIGENT CORRESPONDENT.

Now the building boom will start again, for sure, in Philipsburg. The properties distributed throughout and in the vicinity of this burg, and known as the Morgan, Hale & Co's properties, are being sold rapidly to other parties. Until recently, it was impossible to buy any of them.

Philipsburg is to have a real circus—a 10-cent one at that. It comes for two days—September 26 and 27. Boys, save your pennies.

Thos. H. Davis, representing the company that will play "Human Nature," was in town the other day, and has it booked for the Opera House next week. Surely, the amusement season is opening favorably in this place.

Billy Benner, Jr., son of the boss miller of Centre county, and a regular "chip out of the old block," is on a visit to his grandparents at Lebanon, Pa., where he is having a good time.

Miss Rumbarger, daughter of D. S. Rumbarger, has been given the position of clerk for her father in the Pennsylvania Railroad freight depot. A good appointment, indeed.

Guess we will have electric light all winter. Right.

Only one solitary person found the way into Ft. Lehr, on Saturday night. It was pay day and our town was full to overflowing, but our policemen were equal to the emergency.

The Journal, last week, gave a list of all the school principals since 1838, which, no doubt, was very interesting to many of our citizens. The Journal always gets there.

Samuel Cross, accompanied by his "better half," is now spending a vacation in Lewistown.

The school building is booming up quite rapidly.

Will Tyson is taking in the firemen's parade at Allentown to-day (Tuesday). From there he will go to Huntingdon and parade with the Reliance fire company, of which he is an active and much-liked member.

Last Friday Jacob Yingling jumped from the Morrisdale Branch passenger train, at the tannery crossing, and struck his knee against a tie, inflicting a wound ten inches in length which will cause him pain and inconvenience for a long time.

Stephen Dunlap, one of the early settlers of this neighborhood, died on Friday last, aged 73 years. The funeral occurred on Sunday; interment at Advent cemetery, near Kylertown.

James Heath, of Powelton, contemplates moving to South Philipsburg, having recently purchased the property formerly owned by Slippery Jack Francis.

Dr. J. A. Gallagher, of Houtzdale, was in town on Monday. SOME ONE.

Another Ticket in the Field.

Elsewhere we make reference to the Prohibition county convention which was held at Unionville on Tuesday afternoon. They nominated a county ticket, which is the third so far in this county. We also publish the official call of the Labor Reform party for a county convention, which, likewise, will make No. 4. Perhaps the more the merrier. The Prohibition convention, we are told, was of goodly proportions and entirely harmonious. The names of the candidates are as follows:

Associate Judge—Michael Derstine, of Centre Hall.

Treasurer—W. T. Bair, of Philipsburg.

Sheriff—F. C. Flegal, of Philipsburg.

Register—F. G. Mattern, of Milesburg.

Recorder—M. C. Gephart, of Millheim.

Commissioners—C. Buck, of Unionville; Amos E. Clemson of Ferguson.

Auditors—H. P. Sankey, of Potter township; William J. Dale, of Spring township.

Call for a Centre County Union Labor Convention.

The farmers who are opposed to having the prices of their products made in England; the soldiers who believe that the Government is able to and should do them the same justice it has already done the bond-holders; the skilled and unskilled laborers who believe that the present low rate of wages is both unnecessary and made by monopoly; and all who believe that the people's money should be among the people and not locked up in the United States Treasury, are invited to meet in County Convention, in Bellefonte, on Wednesday Oct. 12th, 1887, to protest against the said evils, and to put a full county ticket in the field.

Each labor, soldier, or farmer's organization will be entitled to one delegate, and each borough, ward or township to one delegate each. Delegates will be required to agree to support the platform and ticket of the Union Labor Party.

T. P. RYNDER,
Chair. State Com. Union Labor Party.
MILESBURG, Sept. 20th, 1887.

—It seems strange in this time and land of plenty to read that famine prevails to an alarming extent on the Cicilian plain in Asia Minor. The inhabitants are forced to the most desperate extremities by it and many are dying.

A Visitor from Space.

Sometimes the celestial visitors to this world are terrifying in their size, aspect and movements. Such a visitor, in the shape of a meteor, swooped down on the coast of Nova Scotia, near Birmingham, last week. A telegram from there describes it as follows:

A wonderful phenomenon occurred here Thursday night about 2 o'clock. A luminous body, looking as large as an elephant, with a long tail attached, suddenly appeared in the southeastern sky and shot out of sight in a southerly direction. The night was cloudless and without a moon, but the stars went out and a strange, soft blue and white light lit up the whole firmament as bright as day. The light was only five or six seconds in duration, when all became suddenly dark again. To a person at the South End it appeared like a fearful explosion in the vicinity of the northeast arm, in which direction the light was brightest, but the noise supposed to accompany most explosions was absent. A reporter was crossing the North End common when he was startled by a sudden burst of fire lighting up the whole neighborhood. The meteor descended like a shot out of the misty air. It looked like a large electric light, and a long tail of sparks trailed behind. The whole presented a beautiful spectacle. To the reporter the fiery visitor seemed to strike the ground a short distance away. Afterward a low, whirring sound was heard in the direction where it had disappeared. The sound kept increasing in volume till the roar was terrible. It seemed as if the bed of the ocean was a huge pot and the water was boiling over.

What was doubtless the same meteor was seen in Halifax, but the time was 9 o'clock. Its fall was accompanied by a most vivid illumination of the whole city. There was a sudden and almost dazzling flash, lasting for a couple of seconds, then all was over. The sight was witnessed at many other places.

—Mr. J. F. Woods, Jr., son of Dr. J. F. Woods, of Boalsburg, is agent in this county for the valuable publication now being issued by the Century Publishing Company. It is entitled we believed "Battles and Leaders of the Late War," and comprises contributions from the pen of the most distinguished survivors of the memorable conflict. Some of these contributions have already appeared in the Century magazine, which is sufficient to prove their excellence. We notice that General Lew Wallace is among the contributors. His works are now having perhaps the largest sale of any modern writer. There are twenty or more contributors almost equally distinguished. The work is printed on beautiful paper and is most elaborately illustrated. It comes in installments, two a month we believe at the rate of 50 cents each. It will be complete in about thirty-six numbers, nine of which, bound, make a very handsome volume. The work is not only valuable, but the publishers are most fortunate in having such a cultivated, agreeable gentleman as Mr. Woods to sell it in this vicinity.

—It is said that the season for grapes and peaches is about ended. Peaches are now higher in price than they were a week ago. One or two severe frosts will probably end the supply of these delicious fruits. By the way, we have no sympathy with the kind of doctrine now indulged in by a few persons—that grapes are not wholesome. We have heard several persons say so recently. It is a new idea to us as we always considered grapes the most wholesome—or at least among the most wholesome—of fruits. But people are always originating some new ideas and if a person were to credit one-tenth of them they would not know what to eat. So it is just as well to smile pleasantly and condescendingly when one talks such ridiculous nonsense, and if you have an appetite for grapes, eat freely of them. Of course, it is not well to eat too much of anything. Temperance in all good things and total abstinence in that which is known to be positively harmful, is the only safe rule to guide.

—The Prohibitionists held a county convention in Unionville on Tuesday afternoon. We don't know whether anyone attended the convention or not, but are inclined to believe that Rev. J. Zeigler was there. By the way, we failed to see Mr. Clevan Dinges in town and perhaps he was there, too. They made nominations and it would be just like them to nominate Dr. E. S. Dorworth for sheriff. Why did our third-party friends break all rule and precedent by holding a county convention in some other than the county town? They should have come to the Bellefonte court house, which now opens its doors to all.

—The funeral services in the Catholic church on Sunday were attended by a very large number of people. Mrs. Merty Cunningham, the deceased lady, in honor of whom so many assembled, was held in high esteem and her death will be sincerely mourned, not only by the large family of sons and daughters who survive her, but by hosts of acquaintances.

—Where in the world did the rumors originate regarding serious accidents at the Patrons' picnic? So far as we have been able to learn, no serious accidents marred the occasion. No child was kicked to death by a horse or killed on the "merry-go-round."

—Ignorant women can learn from the following clipped from an exchange that they sometimes make themselves appreciated in a manner they least apprehended: "In making up a party for a traveling excursion," said Charles Dudley Warner to a friend who was planing one, "always be sure to have it include at least one ignorant woman. She will ask all the questions you are ashamed to ask or think you don't need to ask, and you will secure the benefit of a vast deal of information you would otherwise lose."

—A reunion of the Neff family, the members of which are located in Huntingdon and Blair counties, recently occurred at the residence of Benjamin Neff on the Juniata river in Huntingdon. The family is of Swiss extraction, and descends from two brothers, Francis and John Neff, who came to this state in 1718.

—The news of the death of Captain R. B. Guthrie, of Altoona, which is told at length in the telegraph dispatches, will be read with sentiments of deep sorrow. The Captain is highly esteemed, not only by members of the Fifth Regiment, N. G. P., but by hosts of others.

—The trial of Maggie McCann for the murder of Jacob Boyer ended in Clearfield on Monday. The jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

COL. FRED GRANT has been nominated by the Republicans of New York for Secretary of State.

—Gerberich, Hale & Co. are manufacturing flour rapidly now and are able to supply the increasing demand. They have made arrangements with every grocer to supply it and all you have to do is to leave your order at the store where you trade.

—John Constable, a sixteen year old Cambria county boy, was arrested last week and placed under $500 bail for attempting to wreck trains on the Pennsylvania railroad by turning switches. One passenger train made a narrow escape from being wrecked.

—Several persons who have recently supposed their cooks had suddenly developed into good bread bakers can find the real explanation in the fact that they have purchased some of the new flour manufactured at Gerberich, Hale & Co's mill. If you have not tried it order a sack at once of your grocer.

--The pastor of the Mt. Bethel Reformed church, east of Clintondale, Rev. Shoemaker, has been obliged to postpone the dedication services appointed for next Sunday, the 25th, for the reason that the seats have not been furnished according to contract. The seats were to have been delivered by the first of August.

—On Sunday night John Kisaman, of Renovo, created a decided sensation by trying to shoot Albert Johnson. Both young men were in love with charming Susie Albright and Johnson was the favored suitor. Hence Kisaman tried to end Johnson's life, but didn't aim correctly, and he is now languishing behind the iron bars.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND speaks of "the spirit of toleration for each other's rights." We wonder if it ever occurred to him that rights are not a subject of toleration. Privileges and practices may be tolerated, but rights are to be recognized, maintained and secured. Our rights are not from permission, but are inviolate of themselves.

Misery after Eating

Is avoided by dyspeptics who, guided by the recorded experience of thousands, begin and systematically pursue a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persistence in the use of this pure and highly accredited stomachic, is the sole and agreeable condition of the entire removal of the obstinate forms of dyspepsia, no less than a temporary fit of indigestion. In connection with the use of this specific, it is desirable to avoid articles of food which individual experience has shown to be difficult of digestion, by the stomach sought to be benefited. Each dyspeptic's past observation of his digestive capacity should enable him to be his own guide and mentor in this particular, not trusting to any set of dietetic rules too general to be suited to particular cases. Billiousness and constipation, heartburn, wind upon the stomach, sour eructations, headache and mental despondency, are among the con-comitants of dyspepsia, and we put it to flight by the Bitters.

A Useful Woman Gone.

MILESBURG, Pa., Sept. 20, 1887.

DIED.

LOY.—In Burnside township, Centre county, on September 7, Mrs. Sarah Loy, widow of William Loy, in the 72d year of her age.

Mrs. Loy was a woman of remarkable character and business qualities. More than twenty-nine years ago she was left a widow with eight children, the youngest of whom was but two years of age. Being left without any resources, she kept her family of six girls and two boys together, making for them an excellent home, besides accumulating for them some property. Her children are all married except one daughter, who for many years remained at home with her mother, and who will still remain on the old homestead. The youngest is the wife of the Rev. G. B. Ague, a supernumerary member of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the M. E. church, now residing in Milesburg. For many years she was a member of the M. E. church and a great Bible student. Among her last words she said to one of her daughters—"I have not lived all these years for nothing. My hope is bright for the future." A good woman and an affectionate mother has passed from earth to her reward. X.

The Grape Arbor Meeting

Merchant Traveler.

The sun had set and it was evening, when they stood beneath the grape arbor. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that evenings and sunsets and grape arbor meetings should occur with such unvarying simultaneousness.

"Algernon," she whispered, and a piece of chewing gum turned the whisper into a sibilant sizzle, "you are here on schedule time."

"You bet," he murmured in reply. "But, bark, I hear a footstep."

She harked as requested, and suddenly grasping his wrist, she said in a terrified whisper, "It is father. Fly! fly!" "Gertrude, I have a bunion and I know —alas! too well—that were I to attempt to fly I would make a fizzle of it, must stand my ground."

The old man strode into the grape arbor straight to where Algernon stood.

"Ha!" he said. "So it's you, young man, is it? Well, how are you? Glad to see you. How's your folks?"

"They're well," gasped Algernon.

"That's good. Well, I'll leave you; but if you and Gertie take my advice you'll go right up into the parlor. You're likely to catch your death of cold out here."

The young man fell to the ground motionless. He wrote funny sketches for the newspapers.

Miss Alpha Corman will sell her entire stock of beautiful goods at once, regardless of cost. Everybody should go now if they desire to make a careful selection.

A Short History of the Federal Constitution.

The first century of the constitution of the United States having passed and been duly celebrated, it may be well to give a brief account of the movements by which it was called into existence: The failure of the impost amendment to the articles of confederation, by which it was sought to provide congress with fixed and ample revenues, and the Shay rebellion in Massachusetts, by which the power of congress was clearly shown to be weak, were probably the two events which decided the leaders of public opinion to seek a more perfect union. Upon the invitation of Virginia, twelve delegates from five States, namely, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Virginia, met in September, 1786, at Annapolis, and, not having power to do otherwise, discussed for four days the necessity of strengthening the government. In accordance with a recommendation by this meeting, which was approved by congress in February, 1787, the constitutional convention met in Philadelphia on May 14, 1787, but was not organized until May 25, and by the result of the debates lasting four months the constitution was created. Delegates were present from all the 13 States except Rhode Island, and among them were Rufus King, Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts; Roger Sherman, Oliver Ellsworth, of Connecticut; Alexander Hamilton, Robert Yates, of New York; William Livingston, William Peterson, of New Jersey; George Read, Richard Barrett, of Delaware; Benjamin Franklin, Robert Morris, Gouverneur Morris, Thomas Mifflin, of Pennsylvania; James McHenry, Daniel Carroll, Luther Martin, of Maryland; James Madison, Edmund Randolph, George Mason, George Wythe, of Virginia; John Rutledge, Charles Pinkey, of South Carolina; Alexander Martin, Hugh Williamson, of North Carolina; John Langdon, of New Hampshire, and Abraham Baldwin, of Georgia. The sessions of the convention were private, and the details of the proceedings are to to be gathered from the letters of individuals like Yates, of New York, and Martin, of Maryland, and the painstaking work of Madison. George Washington, who nearly four years before had resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the American army and had retired to private life, was again called to the front in the service of his country and presided over the convention. The two plans for a union—the Virginia plan, proposed by Randolph, and the New Jersey plan, proposed by Patterson—were debated for a month. The latter, giving the same power in congress to small States and large, was rejected on June 19, and after long discussion of the Virginia plan it was, with some important modifications, and after several compromises, made the basis of the new constitution. Pinckney, of South Carolina, and Hamilton, of New York, also presented plans of their own. A study of Madison's writings will give one a fair idea of what the different plans proposed, and the reading of the constitution will show the result of the debates. On September 17, 1787, 36 of the delegates signed the constitution and 16 did not. On September 28 congress resolved to submit the constitution to the several States. It was ratified by Delaware December 7, 1787; Pennsylvania, December 12, 1787; New Jersey, December 18, 1787; Georgia, January 2, 1788; Connecticut, January 9, 1788; Massachusetts, February 6, 1788; Maryland, April 28, 1788; South Carolina, May 23, 1788; New Hampshire, June 21, 1788; Virginia, June 25, 1788; New York, July 26, 1788; North Carolina, November 21, 1788, and Rhode Island, May 26, 1790. The constitution was by resolution of congress declared to be ratified September 13, 1788.

The constitution became practically operative" March 4, 1789. The supreme court was called upon to pass on this question (Owigns vs. Speed, 5 Wheaton, 420,) and it is decided that while the constitution was adopted September 17, 1787, and was ratified by a sufficient number of States June 21, 1788, yet these acts were only preliminary and preparatory to the creation of a government whose effective operation under the constitution began only with the date set for its organization.

April 30, 1789, General Washington was inaugurated as the first president, and the government, which went into effect March 4, or nearly two months before, was set in motion with two of its departments, executive and legislative, complete. The judiciary was not organized until after the approval of the act of September 24, 1789 creating the supreme court.

THE CUP OF JOY.

The third day was the marriage feast
(Chime on, chime on, sweet bells!)
Where first of gifts, our perfect Priest
(The strange old story tells),
Before he took the cup of grief
He drained that we might find relief,
Blessed for all time from sin's alloy,
And blessing, gave, the cup of joy.

At Cana was the marvel done
(Chime on, chime on, sweet bells!)
But every feast beneath the sun
The same old story tells,
How, as the earth joy mounts most high,
"They have no wine" is still the cry;
And still the last becomes the best Where'er the Christ power stands confessed.

"Whatso He saith unto you, do,"
Chime on, chime on, sweet bells!
Till every wedded life anew
The old glad story tells How keeps that world its power divine
To turn the water into wine,
And day by day, though thirst destroy,
Renew the failing cup of joy.

EW WORDS TO AULD LANG SYNE.

Come bring the soul-filled beaker now,
We'll drink to other years,
To friendship hallowed by "lang syne,"
And loves embalmed in tears.
To loves embalmed in tears, my friend,
Where only smiles once shone,
We'll drink the loves of other days
And call them "still our own."

We'll think upon the grass hid mounds,
The silent, sacred spots
Where o'er the heads of cherished ones,
Bloom blue "forget-me-nots."
We'll drink to the dead and and absent ones;
To friends we used to know;
To many a hand that clasped our own
Beloved of long ago.

We know not which shall fall asleep
The first whose call shall be,
Whether my tears for you shall fall,
Or you bend over me;
We only know that each can say
Here sleeps a heart truth called its own.
God keep it pure and happy still,
In sight of His white throne.

ABOVE THE WORLD.

There is no sin in hearts that love,
Whatever men may say;
For they are lifted far above
The laws of lesser clay.

They are unto themselves a law,
No other law can bind;
No other wakes a moment's awe,
For meaner men designed.

Then tell me not 'tis love that parts,
Nor fear the powers above;
For all the sins of loving hearts
Are washed away by love.

Prof. Loisette's Memory Plans.

Prof. Loisette, the famous memory improver, has now returned from his lecturing tour during the heated term to his offices, No. 237 Fifth Avenue, where he will remain to attend to his correspondence pupils. During this, his holiday, he has lectured to large classes at Watch Hill, Saratoga and elsewhere, winding up with three large classes at Chautauqua. We cannot imagine how a system of memory training could be more strongly endorsed than Prof. Loisette's has been by such men as Mr. Richard A. Proctor, Hon. W. W. Astor, Judah P. Benjamin, Doctors Brown and Minor, &c. If more could be added it has been afforded in the fact of the patronage of his system by 100 Columbia College law students, two classes of 200 each at Yale, 400 at Wellesley College, 400 at University of Pennsylvania, and three large classes at Chautauqua. In face of these facts who can hesitate to apply this Memory Specialist for needed memory improvement.

An English Idea of America.

A journal of intelligence published in "hold Hengland" contains the following piece of startling news: "Between the murderous red men and the barbarous prohibitionists the reservation of Kansas west of the United States in North America is likely to become depopulated. For years the Indians have been making it exceedingly sultry for the whites who were allowed to settle there, and now to add to the horror of the situation, the prohibitionists, a large tribe of aborigines, have commenced a war of extermination. The mode of warfare of this tribe is to capture the enemy, and torture him in the most horrible manner. They will shut him up and keep him shut up until he dies of thirst. The prohibitionists are a peculiarly constructed people by nature, as they never drink anything and never get thirsty. Knowing that thirst is the worst torture their enemies could be subject to they hold war dances whenever a prisoner is captured. Postmaster General Vilas has ordered three men of war to the coast of Wichita, where the entire reservation will be bombarded."

Small Pox

"A member of my family was taken down with small-pox. I immediately commenced to use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid. It kept the atmosphere of the room pure and fresh. The patient was greatly relieved, and never for a moment delirious; was not pitted, and was about the house again in three weeks, and no others had it."—Jas. W. Parkinson, Ed "The Caterer," Phila., Pa.

A Lengthy Pastorate.

The late Rev. H. B. Ewell was the pastor of the Baptist Church at Pavilion, N. Y., for nearly half a century. He was a man of strict honor and integrity and the highest Christian character. His word was as good as a government bond, and he never expressed an opinion that he did not firmly believe. He wrote as follows:—"It affords me great pleasure to recommend to the public Gilmore's Aromatic Wine. I believe it to be the most desirable remedy that can be placed in any family. I am well acquainted with the manufacturers, and have confidence in their ability to do a good thing for suffering humanity. I have used their Wine in my family for a number of years with good effect, and firmly believe it will do what is claimed for it."

Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Special to the DAILY NEWS.

PHILADELPHIA, September 15.—The old Quaker City has donned a holiday appearance in honor of the Centennial of the promulgation of the Constitution of the United States. Stores and residences throughout the city are gaily decorated with the National, State and City flags and arms. Immense arches span the principal thoroughfares in the centre of the "historic village," as termed by the press of New York City. Broad Street, the route of the civic and industrial parade, is one mass of humanity. Thousands occupy the hundreds of stands which have been erected. The windows and roofs of every building on the street are filled by spectators, but the greatest number of persons are on the pavements. The police have great difficulty in preventing the crowds from encroaching on the space allotted the moving spectacle which is many miles in length. Promptly at ten o'clock the line moved. There were over 300 floats or tableaux, 5000 horses, 75,000 men and women, and 200 bands, in the great pageant.

One of the principal features was the display of the Knights of the Golden Eagle. This young and flourishing organization, which had expended thousands of dollars for the occasion, had the right of line of the other civic societies. Nearly 5000 of the Sir Knights paraded. There were 103 Castles and Commanderies of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and New York, represented by 4614 members in their handsome uniforms, resplendent in gold braid, consisting of a chapeau, fatigue cap, gold lace baldric and beautiful sword. Thirty-six magnificent banners, costing $6,965, added beauty to the scene. Music was furnished by twenty-six bands comprising 485 instruments. The cavalcade consisted of 150 Sir Knights. Altogether, about 300 of participants were mounted. At least 30 men were attired in the glittering armor of the Crusade Knight. There were 3 handsome tableaux on floats costing several thousand dollars.

The display of the Knights of the Golden Eagle provoked enthusiasm. The fine appearance, deportment and marching of the men and the precision with which the different military evolutions were performed called for applause along the entire line.

The expense to this Order for the tableaux, carriages, bands, horses and armor was $6,960. The uniforms and regalia of the members of the Commanderies and Castles, banners, flags and guidons cost about $61,675, a total of $68,635.

The Convention at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, September 14.—The Committee on Resolutions reported a platform arraigning the Democratic party for short comings, and asserting the necessity of Republican restoration; declaring for protection and that the tariff laws when changed shall be changed by their friends; approving the temperance legislation of last winter; attacking President Cleveland for his faithlessness to Civil Service Reform and Governor Hill for his vetoes; declaring for advanced Civil Service Reform improvement in the late laws; cheap transportation; pure primaries and elections, and sympathizing with Irish Home Rule.

The ticket was completed as follows: Comptroller, Judge Jesse Lamarent, Saratoga; State Treasurer, James H. Carmichael, Erie; Attorney General, James A. Denison, Fulton; State Engineer and Surveyor, O. H. P. Cordell, Tompkins. A resolution was adopted looking to the appointment of a colored man as an extra member of the State committee.

Huntingdon Democrats.

HUNTINGDON, Sept. 13.—The Democratic County Convention nominated the following ticket here yesterday. Prothonotary, James Kelley; Treasurer, Colonel John S. Miller; County Commissioners, Robert McNeal, of Tell township, and Westley Miller, of Jackson township; Poor Director, Bigler Dunlap, of Franklin township; Auditors, Calvin Mirely, of Porter township, and George B. Porter, of Petersburg; Coroner, Dr. George Luffin, of West township. Ex-Sheriff Thomas K. Henderson was elected a member of the State Committee, and Alexander Denny, County Chairman. No nominations were made for Register and Recorder and District Attorney.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing the Democratic national platform of 1884 and Cleveland's administration, and denouncing the Legislature and State officials for alleged negligence in reference to the failure of the State revenue bill.

The Condemned Men.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—The seven condemned anarchists spent the night in sounder security from the intrusion of friend or foe than they have in months. The outside of the jail was carefully patrolled on all sides by armed deputy sheriffs, policemen in uniform and detectives in citizens garb. The force of deputy sheriffs who guarded all the approaches was increased, and these were supplemented by relays of uniformed police. All unknown to even the curious pedestrians who peered around the precincts of the jail, the streets and alleys on all sides for several blocks were quietly patrolled by detectives, who sized up all suspicious-looking stragglers and kept a watchful eye on all little knots that gathered anywhere in the neighborhood of the jail.

The anarchists of the city are so well known that none of them could go through the outposts without detection. Within the jail all was still as death. Persons, apparently worn out with the excitement of the day, retired early. Spies tugged nervously at his thin mustache and wearily passed his hand over his brow as he paused every now and then in his writing and threw down his pen. He seemed ill at ease, and his thoughts were evidently far away from his narrow cell. Fischer and Schwab wrote steadily for hours, and Sam Fielding whiled away his dreariness with a re perusal of the crushing news that the morning had brought him.

Anarchists to Hang.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The first official information that reached this city was a telegram from the Court Clerk at Ottawa to the State's Attorney's office here, saying:

Anarchists' case affirmed. Execution November 11.

Mr. Purcell, of the State's Attorney's office, ran at once to the jail with the dispatch. Following on his heels was a messenger carrying a telegram for August Spies that had been sent from Ottawa by an agent of the Anarchists.

The turnkey who took the dispatch to cell No. 25 and shoved it through the bars, lingered a moment to watch the effect it would have on Spies. The arch-anarchist took the message, glanced firmly at the turnkey, and then withdrew to the dark end of the cell. In two minutes or so he called gently to the old man who sits as death-watch outside his barred door, and asked him to hand the yellow telegraph sheet to Parsons. From him it went to all the others, and at last reached Neebe, who is only under sentence of imprisonment.

Newspaper men had been rigorously shut out from the condemned men, and all observations had to be taken from the outside of the cage, about ten yards from the cell door. It could be dimly seen that each of the condemned men made ostentatious efforts at coolness and bravado. They took seats at their cell doors and read newspapers and books, smoked cigars, and once Lingg, the bomb maker, whistled. Their wives and friends had been with them for an hour during the morning, but about thirty minutes before the news came they were all excluded and the prisoners locked up, each one by himself.

Sheriff Matson had remained away from the jail. By his orders during the night the guards had all been doubled, including the court bailiffs. There were twenty of the Sheriff's men on duty—ten turnkeys and guards that are on regular duty at the jail; six policemen who patroled the alley on the outside, and Captain Schaack brought with him four detectives this morning, who were stationed in the jail court.

Upon Captain Schaak the protection of the jail devolves. He professes to experience no uneasiness from any attempts to break into the jail, and says he has taken every precaution.

A Family Burned to Death.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 16—At 12.30 o'clock this morning an explosion occurred in the grocery store of Dominick M. Messina, at the corner of Enghiem and Daupin streets. A moment later the entire building was on fire, and all escape from the upper stories, where Messina's family resided, was cut off. The fire must have been burning for some time before the explosion, which was doubtless caused by the ignition of powder which Messina kept for sale. When the firemen reached the scene the voices of the Messina family could be heard, mingled with the roaring and crackling of the flames, crying for help. Every effort of the firemen to rescue the unfortunate inmates of the burning building failed, and the entire family, consisting of Messina, his wife and their four children were burned to death.

Will Visit Individual Operators.

MT. CARMEL, Pa., September 15.—Chairman Davis, of the miners' and laborers' demand committee, started on a tour through the valley to-day to confer with the individual operators regarding the acceptance of the new basis adopted by the Reading company. Superintendent Bickle, of the Bellmore colliery and Isaac Way & Co., of Morris Ridge, have accepted the new rate and their men will return to work to-morrow. It is thought that a general resumption will take place on Monday.

Railroad Disaster.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Midland train was standing on a crossing a mile from Doncaster to-day while tickets were being collected when the Liverpool express dashed into it. It was a long time before the injured and dying, who were wedged in the ruins, could be recovered. Twenty-four persons were killed and many of injured cannot recover. The disaster was caused by defective signaling.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 14.—Ex-Governor Luke P. Blackburn, of Frankport, Kentucky, died there to-day. His last intelligible words were: "Oh, the beauty of religion!" Ex-Governor Blackburn was born June 16, 1816, in Woodford county, Kentucky.

CUPID'S CAPERS.

THE MERRY DIVINITY LOOKS LOVINGLY ON TWO HAPPY COUPLES.

There were about fifty persons present at the wedding which took place on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Strickland, on Bishop street. The number bidden to the festivity was limited only to the capacity of the house to accommodate them, and, of course, relatives and near personal friends of the chief contracting parties were included.

Before the ceremony began the guests thronged into the parlor or into the room on the second floor where the presents were displayed, which composed an unusually elegant collection and were greatly admired. Conversation flowed freely and pleasantly during the time which intervened before 3 o'clock. Then the bridal couple entered. As our readers are probably aware, the bride was Miss Clara, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Strickland, and the groom was Mr. Mitchell I. Gardner, of Howard. They took their position in front of the mantel on the west side of the room. At their right was Miss Annie Meese, the brides-maid,and Mr. Will Conley,of Milesburg, who acted as groomsman. Rev. William Laurie, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian church, spoke the words which rendered the union complete.

"What a happy looking bride!" "The groom seems to be the picture of bliss!" were the comments from all quarters. Those who know the bride are aware that she is sprightly and bright, of unvarying cheerfulness of disposition, the fortunate possessor of useful and ornamental accomplishments. The groom is similarly favored. The effect was complete and wonderfully pleasing on this occasion. The bride's gown was of ecru satin, trimmed with velvet. She carried a bouquet of Marshal Neil roses. Her brides-maid wore a dress of similar material, though trimmed differently. With bright smiles and charming naivete they received the congratulations of those who pressed forward for that purpose.

In due time a general promenade was made down the stairway to the dining room which was thronged with the guests, who gathered around the tables and were served to a most elaborate and tempting menu: salads, sandwiches, coffee, cakes in infinite variety, grapes, bananas and ices.

Before the bride and groom departed to enter their carriage for the train she appeared in a traveling costume. Numerous farewells were expressed, white showers of rice fell on their devoted heads, and the proverbial slipper followed the carriage as it rolled away.

Their wedding journey is in a western direction. When they return they will at once locate at Howard, where the groom is a book-keeper for the Howard Rolling Mill Company.

The happy couple have our earnest and very confident hopes for their future. They are well prepared for life as they shall meet it in any of its varied aspects and we hope much of it will be sunshine to them. Bellefonte will greatly miss the bride, who was one of the most capable teachers in the public schools and whose presence wherever she might be was the synonym of cheer and good feeling.

The costly and carefully-selected wedding gifts constituted a fitting testimonial to the esteem in which she was held. The display has seldom been excelled in Bellefonte, including a complete chamber suit, numerous luxurious chairs, articles in silver, china and glass and all the latest novelties in the new and fashionable wares, ornamental vases, table linen, pictures, etc.

The other wedding occurred at 8 o'clock p. m. at the home of the late Mr. John Barnhart, near this place. Miss Kate M. Barnhart, the bride, is a most charming young lady. The groom was Mr. William M. McClure, the popular harness maker. He is an industrious young gentlemen and carries on the business for himself. Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D., officiated. Only a few friends were present and the entire affair was conducted in a very quiet manner. The evening train took them on their way to Philadelphia. May happiness and prosperity be theirs in large measure.

—The desperate efforts to get awake which some people are compelled to resort in order to make the 6 o'clock a. m. train are amusing. It is said that A. A. Dale, Esq., was compelled to go off the other day without his breakfast. On Wednesday morning Mr. James McClain, the politically wide-awake chairman of the Democratic county committee, had a similar hasty experience. Mr. L. A. Shaffer always manages to get up early enough to go to market and to reach early trains, but it required his utmost efforts to arouse his neighbor, Mr. McClain, and then that gentleman didn't have time to pack his satchel or put on his coat, and had to take a lunch in his pocket.

—Friday morning the body of Mr. W. Lincoln Beck was brought to this place from Pittsburg. Mr. Beck was only 24 years of age. He was the engineer of a freight train on the Pittsburg and Western railroad. On Tuesday morning, of this week, at an early hour, he started with his train and at seven o'clock his engine collided with the locomotive of a gravel train, at a point named Callery Junction. The engine fell on top of him and his face was terribly scalded by escaping steam. It was necessary to amputate one of his legs. He died about 11 o'clock at night after lingering through the day in great agony. His wife lives in this place. She is the daughter of Mr. John Derstine, of East Lamb street.

The Constitutional Celebration.

Although we live away here in the centre of the State, quite a distance from the Metropolis, we are glad that it is so patriotic and enterprising as to celebrate the important events in the country's history in such a decided manner. Philadelphia is known far and near as the most delightful city in the United States as a place of residence. She also understands better than any other city how to get up a big celebration at the proper time. Her citizens are liberal in their donations of money for such purposes and profit by it. In this she is a model for other cities, especially for New York, which should seek to cultivate, to a greater degree, the taste for such celebration, and thus attest to the world that she is part of the United States. Perhaps if Philadelphia was equally well situated as New York as the chief port she would be a more flourishing city than Gotham, as her citizens are just the kind to boom their city to chief importance. Why should Philadelphia not be the Metropolis of the country? It is not necessary or usual for the chief port of entry to be the centre of wealth.

But the principal point to remember is that Philadelphia has given an immense boom to the business of patriotism—the art of remembering the old, good and true. This has caused the United States to be looked to and respected in the world at large more than the wealth of New York city possibly could.

The constitution of this country has been recently pronounced a wonderful document, by Gladstone, perhaps the the chief genius of the world. We have cause to regard it as such and to be proud of it. We can rejoice in common with Philadelphia, and we don't believe that any other one community is more largely represented in Philadelphia. Of the 4,000 people of this place a large proportion of them are in that city. A similar attendance from other communities would give Philadelphia at least 1,000,000 strangers.

The Funeral Friday Morning

The remains of the late W. Lincoln Beck, the young man who was killed on Tuesday by an accident on the Pittsburg and Western Railroad, near Pittsburg, were brought to this place on Friday. Thos. L. Stewart and Frank Lee came with the remains from Allegheny. The following were from Altoona: W. H. Darrow, W. W. Plumer, W. G. Miller, F. P. Bollinger, W. R. Lucas and J. F. Saucerman. We are assured by Mr. W. H. Darrow, who was so kind as to give us the above names, that others would have come also but for the impossibility of leaving their work at this time. The gentlemen named acted as pall-bearers.

The funeral cortege proceeded at once to the cemetery, where the interment took place. The widow of deceased resides in this place, she being a daughter of Mr. John Derstine, of East Lamb St. Mr. Darrow informs us that the deceased held a benefit of $1500 in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. From the fact that deceased was an engineer an Altoona paper stated that the benefit was held in the Brotherhood of Engineers. It is, however, as we state above, in the Firemen's Brotherhood.

Philipsburg Again.

Well, the corner stone of the new school house has been laid, and a gala day it was in Philipsburg. Rev. Monroe, of Bellefonte, made an excellent address. The Massons marched in parade, in regalia. Quite a number from Bellefonte participated in the services. A large number of people, young and old, were at the scene long before the time for the services to commence, several stores closed for an hour or so, and, taking all in all, it was a very pleasant and profitable event.

A child by name of Dillon was buried in the new cemetery day before yesterday.

Charley Davis, while attending to firing a switch lamp, down the road, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, fell a distance of about twenty feet, spraining his ankle, badly, which will necessitate him being off duty for at least five or six weeks.

Mrs. S. B. Linthurst is in Philadelphia.

Well, Jim Nelson how did you enjoy the state fair?

Some of our citizens are anxious for another circus to make our town livelier and poorer.

SOME ONE.

—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. has given notice that the rebate tickets issued on that system to persons paying their fares upon the train, instead of purchasing a ticket at the office, will be redeemed on any division of the system where the tickets are used. Heretofore it has been the custom of the company to cash those tickets only on divisions upon which they were issued.

—One of the most pleasing features of the Patrons' picnic was the exhibition of views of the battlefield of Gettysburg which was given on Thursday evening by Messrs. Bartram and Long.

Unionville Items.

Farmers are busy putting in their fall crop,cutting off corn and raising potatoes Owen Underwood and John Stover have a fine crop of the latter and are shipping them by the car load to other markets.

The hum of the steam apple grinder is frequently heard at Wm. P. Fisher's plantation, where the abundant apple crop of the neighborhood is converted into cider.

L. B. Bathurst has further improved the appearance of his novelty store by giving it a liberal coat of paint.

It is good evidence that this is a pleasant little town, when it has not been without visitors at any time this summer "and still they come."

Mrs. Mary Henchy, of Lackawanna county, Pa., is visiting her parents (A. N. Russell and wife) and other relatives here.

Miss Allie Wright, of Adams county, Pa., is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Dr. Russell. Lydia Green, of Philadelphia, is also stopping at Dr. Russell's and greeting her friends.

Lydia Cleaver, formerly of Philadelphia, now residing in Bedford county, Pa., has been visiting at her brother-in-law's, J. Cleaver,and just departed for her home.

Mrs. Angeline Spencer, of Clearfield county, has just arrived on her return from a trip in Virginia and North Carolina and is stopping at J. Cleaver's and calling on her many friends.

Mrs. Ada Underwood, of Elizabeth City, N. C., is spending some time with her brother A. J. Griest, renewing former acquaintances.

A Mr. Campbell and wife, of the state of Indiana, who are relatives of Mr. Bathurst, have just arrived.

Geo. L. Peters, an old citizen of this place, has returned from a two years visit among his children in the West. J.

Following is a complete list of the letters remaining uncalled for in the post-office at Bellefonte,Centre county,Penn'a, September 12, 1887:

Moyer, E. Martin-2, A. J. Miller & Co., James Phillips, H. F. Rader, W. H. Steadman, Mrs. Belle Saylor-2, Sanford Smith, Christie Wilson, Wm. M. Wilson.

Persons inquiring for letters named in the above list will please say advertised.

JAS. H. DOBBINS, P. M.

—Honesty continues to be a quality possessed by some people. For instance, a gentleman, on Thursday evening or Friday morning, found a $10 bill and at once went to look to find the owner. When we saw the gentleman he had heard that the loser was some member of a family living near the glass works and doubtless he easily found them. The family he believed to be one to whom the loss of such a sum would been felt severely. It is fortunate that the money was found by an honest man, and in this instance the tables were turned—instead of the loser searching for the finder, the finder was hastening to return the money to its rightful owner.

—The boys need a word of caution because they have recently made themselves somewhat "too numerous" at night near the residences on Allegheny street. They make a great deal of noise, and have been known to throw some hard and some soft vegetables and fruit against the doors or in the windows. Now, boys, perhaps you forget that if you throw a pumpkin up it will come down squash—and just imagine how extremely disagreeable it is to have a pumpkin come down on a handsome brussels carpet in the parlor. Have sport if you want to, but dont do anything that will injure or destroy life or property.

—Johnny J. Grove, the son of Evaline C. and J. A. Grove, who now live in Larned, Kansas, and who formerly resided in Centre Hall, met with a terrible accident a couple of weeks ago which resulted in death almost instantly. He was taking two ponies to pasture, riding on one and having the other fastened by a strap to his arm. It is supposed that the latter animal frightened at something and run, dragging Johnny from his place and along until he died from the injuries received.

—Writers get strangely mixed in regard to the number of inhabitants in the Chinese Empire and it looks much as if the real number is not known. Some time ago we were gravely informed that there were 450,000,000; still later it was said that disease had decreased the population and the number was then less than 400,000,000. On Thursday the Philadelphia Press credited the country with having 500,000,000. Such different figures should not be given by responsible writers.

—The Thirteenth Annual Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania will be held October 12, 13 and 14, in Lewisburg, Union county. Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the National W. C. T. U., will be present, and make an address on Social Purity. The number of Unions has greatly increased during the past year, there being now over one thousand in the State, and this is expected to be the largest and most important meeting ever held.

One of the Candidates.

Among the callers at the office of this paper on Friday was T. M. Gramley, candidate on the Republican ticket for register. Mr. Gramley is a resident of Miles township, and is a bright, active, agreeable young gentleman. He has been, during several years, a school teacher, and thought some of coming to Milesburg to teach during the fall and winter. The people of Miles township refuse to part with him, however, and inducements sufficient were offered to make him conclude to stay. We understand he has just closed an excellent select school and will teach the first grade of the Madisonburg schools as soon as they begin. It is only necessary to know Mr. Gramley and to learn what an intelligent gentleman he is to at once conclude that he is just the person needed to fill the office of register with the greatest ability. One thing decidedly in his favor, we think, is that although he is a true and earnest Republican from conviction, he is not a politician in the ordinary sense of that term. The nomination came to him as a surprise. He will not spend his time while in office in bringing about another nomination or in any of the tricks which so disgrace the Democratic ring, but will attend faithfully to the affairs of the office, correcting whatever abuses have crept into it. Here is a candidate whom every citizen in the county should determine to vote for.

—Some of the women of this country are spending much intellectual force in a useless and unappreciated manner. Not only do they spend much intellectual force, but also a share of that more sordid ingredient—money. We receive, weekly, sheets containing articles on the woman question, which we are solicited to publish. But we look in vain through the stuff for anything which seems to contain proper sentiments, and commit the sheets to the waste basket. Sisters, it is a great mistake for you to suppose that you are not now occupying the proper sphere. Your sphere is in every way as high as that of man, but different in kind, just as by nature you differ from your brothers. It is wrong for you to endeavor to change it, as to do so will surely bring some trouble on the human race. Be content to be mothers, sisters, help-meets—yes, veritable angels on earth; but don't try to be politicians, corner loafers, midnight brawlers, etc.

—The Huntingdon Journal says: On account of the inability of George Auker to endure the journey from his home and the strain of the trial, the case against the three men now in jail charged with the attempted robbery of Peter Hawn, and the murderous assault upon Mr. Auker, will not be tried this week. This is by the advice of Dr. Miller, who has attended Auker through his long illness, and who is not disposed to risk the life of his patient by subjecting him to a ride over six miles of rough and hilly roads and the excitement that would necessarily follow his attendance as a witness. The wounded man is mending slowly, and by the aid of crutches is able to move, with great care, about the room. The trial will be disposed of at the December sessions.

—All who know him will regret to hear that Rev. Daniel Hartman, of Mill Hall, who is one of the oldest preachers in the Methodist church, had a slight stroke of paralysis on Saturday, the 16th inst., which affected one of his eyes. On Wednesday, says the Daily Democrat, of Lock Haven, he went to that city and on the train returning to his home he had another slight attack, but was able to get off the train himself and go to his home. The attack seems to have deprived him of his recollection, and when the effects had partially worn off he couldn't remember how or when he had gotten off the train or how he had reached the house. The old gentleman is, we are pleased to say, getting better.

—This is the time when nothing is of interest unless it be a hundred years old, and we must confess that in that hundred years ago many things looked more graceful and handsome than they do now. For instance, in one of the advertisements in the Philadelphia Press on Thursday was a picture of a modern dude and one of one hundred years ago, and the latter looked far handsomer. The style of attire then was in every way more tasteful than it is at present.

—The arrangement which Mr. Henry Harris has procured to use in connection with the badge of mourning on the doors on the occasion of funerals is excellent and convenient. The name of the deceased, the date of death and the time of the funeral can all be placed in the frame and consequently all these facts which people desire to known can be learned by a glance at the card.

—Mr. Will Hillibish, of the Logan Hose Company, will go to Allentown this week to represent the Logans at the Firemen's Convention to be held in that city from the 21st to the 24th. Mr. Hillibish is going to extend to the convention a hearty invitation to come to Bellefonte next year. It is a great organization, such as has taxed even Altoona to accommodate, but somehow nothing seems too big for Bellefonte, as no gathering thus far has ever equaled the preparations made for it. We hope the firemen will accept Bellefonte's hospitality and the people of the town will do their part toward making the event very enjoyable.

A Novel Bet.

While I am not a betting man, said F. J. Cheney, of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., I considered it my religious duty to make that fellow a bet. You see he was about dead, and I guess he would have died before Spring, if I had not got him on the bet. You know some men had rather lose their life than lose a hundred. Well he was one of that kind, and we both came near being out, but I saved my hundred and it only cost him ten dollars. How's that? He sent for me one day and said the doctors had all given him up to die, with the catarrh. I told him that I would bet him $100 that Hall's Catarrh Cure would cure him or I would give him $100 if it failed. He took the latter proposition. This was three months ago; you see how he looks now, don't you, as well as any one, and a dandy.—American, Toledo, O.

—Referring to the address delivered by Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D., on the occasion of the laying of the corner stone of the school building in Philipsburg, the Jouanal says: "The Doctor's address was magnificent—in the most elegant diction, containing some of the grandest truths and most sublime thoughts that ever emanated from the fertile mind of man."

GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend on this for certain.

19-3-1y

—The schools of Renovo are crowded and the proposition of forming an additional school is discussed, but the idea of another school building has not been advanced. The people of Renovo continue to patronize roller skating rinks and do other queer things which were given up almost a decade ago in Bellefonte, hence they are not expected to erect school houses.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after testing its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human sufferings, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full direction for preparing and using. MEN AND THINGS.

OPEN SECRETS ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES YOU KNOW.

Did you ever have an attack of the exploration fever?

If you have not, don't get it, and allow us to congratulate you because you have escaped it. We are just convalescing from a serious attack of it now. We caught it last winter when we heard Mr. Henry M. Stanley tell his story about finding Livingston. He spoke so eloquently about the exploration business generally that before we had heard him through we had the disease so badly that nothing but exploring something or other could possibly cure us. Fortunately we did not have an opportunity to put into practice any of our newly found theories until about one month since, and as our field of operation lay in Centre County, we thought the best line of exploration we could pursue would be some of the numerous caves abounding in the locality. We knew that Luray had been discovered almost by accident, and that it was possible, if not probable, that a second Luray might exist in our own neighborhood.

* * * * * * * *

Let me tell you about the finding of Luray. If you have been there, of course, you have had the story from the guide, and after a skillful cross-examination you extracted about the following from him:—

It had long been known that the limestone strata of Page county, Va., in which Luray is situated, contained numerous caverns, and that some of them were of quite a respectable size. One of these caverns, situated about one mile east of the town of Luray has quite a number of traditious associated with it, one of which in that Peter Ruffiner, a son of the earliest settler in the valley, went out hunting one morning and did not return. After one week's search his gun and powder horn were found at the mouth of this cave. The searching party entered and found the man nearly dead from exposure and want of food. No one would go near the cave after that, and in 1878 when Mr. P. B. Stebbins attempted to form a party to explore it thoroughly he failed, although he finally secured the co-operation of two brothers named Campbell to engage in the hunt for a new cave. They spent four weeks in fruitless search. One evening as they were returning home from a long tramp they noticed a large sink hole about one hundred yards from the old cave. It was closed up with stones and rubbish, having been used as a deposit for refuse matter by the farmers for generations back. They decided to investigate this suspicious looking cavity, and after several hours work they secured an entrance into what is now known as the Caverns of Luray.

The "Micawbers" thought that they had found their "Australia" at last, so they kept very quiet about their discovery until they had purchased, for an insignificant sum, the land on which the cave was situated. Any intelligent young lawyer will be glad to tell you about the interesting course of litigation that resulted from this sale, and how the case was carried to the highest court and the original owner won his suit and afterwards sold his cave for $40,000.

Such is a very abbreviated history of the discovery of the Caverns of Luray.

* * * * * * * *

Our own experience in cave hunting was similar to that of Mr. Stebbins and his party only in one instance, that is, we "spent four weeks in fruitless search." The unexplored caves of Centre county, so far as we could find, are small and not worth the trouble of going into them. The largest is on the farm of Mr. John L. Miller, a few miles from Rock Springs and we believe that if this cavern could only be opened satisfactorily that a large cave might be found. Our reasen for thinking this is based principally upon the fact that a large stream of water courses through the cavern.

You know caves can only occur in limestone strata, and they result from the action of carbonic acid upon the carbonates of lime or magnesia. This acid is found in the air and it is also one of the products of the decomposition of animal and vegetable waters: so that rain water, in percolating the through the soil, is highly charged with it, and all that is needed to make a large cave is the initiatory crevice in the limestone rock through which this acidified water may pass, and time will do the rest.

The volume of water rushing through the cave at Mr. Miller's is certainly large enough to accomplish a great deal in cave building. Then, too, several miles distant from the Miller farm Spruce Creek has its source. It rises from a spring the depth of which is so great as not yet to have been found. Now, the direction in which this stream at the entrance of the cave takes is toward that spring. The volume of water and the chemical analyses of both streams lead us to believe that they are one and the same. The difference in the elevation above sea level between the two points is not great enough to admit of a spring of such depth without storing up a great quantity of water, and one of the ways in which it could be stored would be in the great cavern which may or may not be there.

You can arrive at no definite conclusion without blasting away the rocks which obstruct the passage, and that would be attended with considerable danger. We give our theory for what it is worth, and don't you think it is a plausible one?

* * * * * * * *

If you are wise you will not become a monomanic on the cave subject. They form anything but pleasant fields for exploration. They are wet and muddy, and very often you will find the ceiling so low that for long distances you will have to creep on your hands and knees over rocks, through small streams of water, and through mud and slime. In one of our expeditions our torch became extinguished and as the matches in our pocket were wet we could not relight it. The darkness was most intense, and almost rivaled that of one of our neighboring towns where the gas of the street lamps is turned off at 9.30 o'clock p. m. on rainy nights.

We had an interesting time getting back to the cave entrance and the amount of arnica and court-plaster in which we saw fit to invest caused such an increase in our druggists' bank account that we do not like to give the figures publicity.

C. E. W.

—The discourse delivered by Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D., on Sunday evening, on the national constitution and what is necessary to its perpetuity was a powerful and able deliverance. He read for the evening lesson a chapter from Nehemiah and chose his text from the Prophecy of Isaiah. He propounded five propositions bearing on the subject, some of which are universally accepted as true, others denied by some but generally received. He defended these propositions with eloquence, wit and learning. A summary, even if we could give it, would hardly give an idea of the arguments produced. They were certainly of the most advanced Christian character, strong and tangible. For instance, the theory that only the believers in God and the Bible and a state of future rewards and punishments shall have the privileges of citizenship is so seldom heard now as to be positively startling, yet it is part of the organic law of Pennsylvania. Knowledge he named as an essential to good citizenship, and as it becomes more diffusive liberty correspondingly increases. The strides of education were depicted in bright colors and glowing imagery. The most highly educated peoples have monarchs only in name. His lessons drawn from the decay of former republics were exhaustive and learned. Intemperance, gambling and averice he classed as among the greatest evils threatening the republic. The spirit of clanishness evinced by foreigners who have become naturalized citizens was condemned in unmeasured terms. These people, who have no proper ideas of true liberty prate about the laws which compel Sabbath observance as opposed to what they term personal liberty. We take it that the reverend gentleman believes that compulsory education would largely serve as a safeguard.

—The young lady who goes to church is an interesting and an anomalous creature. Sometimes she sits straight and prim, looking neither to the right or left and deeply intent in the services. She don't care whether the girl in front of her wears silk or calico; whether her dress is a new one or one of ancient date, nor whether she has or has not her hair arranged in latest style. Neither does she look around to see if her young man is present to walk home with her. Of course, he is. This is the proper way for all the young ladies to act in church, but many of them dont. Miss Mary Apeley is just sure that Sarah Butterfly has a dress which is made in an entirely new style. Miss Butterfly dont sit in a position to permit a very easy inspection, but Miss Apeley is bound to see just how the dress is made. A dozen times during the solemn service she scans it so closely as to be almost embarrassing to Miss Butterfly, but Miss B., who has the reputation of being dressed in the height of style, is used to such inspections and takes it as a matter of course. Then Miss Apeley wants to see if there is any other equally well dressed individual in the church. So she cranes her head in every direction. The efforts of the poor girl to see how each dress in the church is made are alarming lest her neck should be injured in the attempt. She cant tell you whether the text was from Genesis or Revolation. But it is all the same to her, as she is of opinion that Revolation is the first book in the Bible and Genesis the last. Other girls there are of an equally curious kind, of whom we will tell you in another chapter.

—It is not well for newspapers to publish every rumor they hear for nine times in ten such rumors are incorrect. For instance, the report being circulated in the papers that Mr. Fearon Mann, proprietor of Bellefonte's famous axe manufactory, is about to move to McKeesport is entirely without foundation and Mr. Mann requests us to contradict it. The celebrity of the axe manufactured by Mr. Mann is identical with the fame of Centre county, and we are glad that he has no intention of moving the factory elsewhere.

—Mr. Lawrence L. Brown, John C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Beck and a dozen other folks who take special interest in the affairs of Huntingdon have gone to the centennial celebration in that place.

Notes from Huntingdon's Centennial.

The first day's demonstration exceeded the expectations of even the originators.

Bonfires were built on every eminence throughout the county, rendering the night as bright as day. Perhaps that is where the smoke comes from.

There are 15,000 strangers in the town, taxing its ability to accommodate.

The industrial and civic parade was a magnificent success. A feature of it was the miniature cars displayed by the Pennsylvania railroad company. (Pity it didn't exhibit a fac simile of Bellefonte's depot building.) A novel spectacle was presented by the ladies who were engaged in cording flax and spinning it. They were dressed in ancient garb. This so pleased Governor Beaver that he made special reference to it in his address. The ancient school house was an attractive feature. It was built of logs and had greased paper in the windows for glass.

The ascent of Prof. Hogan suspended to his hot air balloon was a success. But when in mid-air the air-ship collapsed and descended rapidly. The Professor came down on the top of a house with such violence as to injure him severely. From there he rolled to the ground. The spectacle frightened everyone. Notwithstanding his dangerous experience, the Professor announced that he would make another ascent on Wednesday.

Hon. J. Simpson Africa delivered an historical address. Gov. Beaver's speech was carefully prepared and excellent, being received with much enthusiasm.

The above notes are gathered from a letter in the Altoona Tribune.

—The same 10-cent show which will be in Bellefonte on Wednesday was at Fishkill, N. Y., recently when the Journal of that place said: "The large pavillion under which Messrs. Hurlburt, Hunting & Frost have their show, was packed with people to witness the performance last night. The universal expression of those who have seen the show is, that it is the best they have ever seen for the money, and in fact the performances are better than we see in some larger shows, though there is not so much of it. There is a good collection of animals among which is a lioness with three eight weeks old young ones. The cage containing this family is the centre of interest in the menagerie department."

—To-day begins Huntingdon's great centennial celebration. If the programme is carried out, Governor Beaver is present to-day to deliver an address, speeches by Ex-Senator William A. Wallace and Hon. J. Simpson Africa also having been promised. A parade, balloon ascension, fireworks and G. A. R. encampment formed part of the exercises. To-morrow will be a parade including fire companies, I. O. O. F. lodges, camps of the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, historic and comic representations, etc. We notice that the Reliance Fire Company, of Philipsburg, and the Bald Eagle Lodge, No. 410, I. O. O. F., of Milesburg, will be in parade.

—Monday evening was the regular time for the meeting of the borough council. The number present lacked only one of being a quorum. Members present were Messrs. Andrew Brockerhoff, Ed. Brown, Jr., Robert Hepburn and Robert Cole. Of those absent, President Hillibish was known to be in Allentown, Mr. R. A. Brouse in Philadelphia and Mr. Frank Stover in Pittsburg. The whereabouts of Mr. S. A. Brew was not known and he would have been sent for if business of importance was pending. As it was, however, the members present signed bills and talked about water tax, some of which are supposed to be out of all proportion to others.

—Every morning we notice one movement of the trains on the track at the station here which occurs to us as more dangerous than any other. As soon as the Snow Shoe train has been emptied of its passengers it at once returns toward the round house. This requires it to cross the street just as the passengers are crossing the track at that place. Of course, their backs are turned to the train and they have no thought of it moving so soon. Consequently, there are many narrow escapes. Arrangements should be made to have a man always on guard there to keep people from crossing the track until after the train has moved away.

—"Human Nature," which delightful comedy will be rendered in Humes' Hall next Friday evening, is winning great applause wherever it appears. A telegram from Bristol, Pa., to the New York Clipper, on August 6, says: "Human Nature," opened its season last night at Bristol's to a jammed auditorium. The performance went without a hitch. Mr. O'Gorman's assumption of the Old Farmer was one of the cleverest pieces of character acting ever seen here."

—H. Y. Stitzer's book store on Bishop street is filled with the most select and desirable goods sold in Bellefonte. The stock of stationery is large and choice. There are books, carefully selected, in great abundance. Stitzer's is the place to secure the best school books at the cheapest rates. A large and excellent stock of novelties, pocket books, pocket knives, etc. Visit his store and examine the stock.

The ceiling is decorated with the national flag, and at one end is a portrait of Lincoln and at the other end one of Washington. This car, now known as No. 540, was new in February, 1861, and was decorated for the purpose of carrying the President. It is still in good condition and runs regularly.

—Quite frequently we hear complaints that electric lights in this or that part of the town are not burning at night. The manager of the station has often told us that he would like to be informed when there is any such difficulty and he will at once attend to it.
